

Three ventures agreed to by Nixon, Brezhnev

MOSCOW (AP) — President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev achieved the first concrete results of their summit today, agreeing on three cooperative ventures, including research and development on an artificial heart.

The two other agreements involve cooperation in the housing field and in energy development.

The agreement on heart research contemplates joint efforts to improve synthetic cardiac valves and to develop artificial hearts. Researchers from both countries also would seek ways to extend the operational life of cardiac pacemakers and would work together to improve diagnostic techniques aimed at heading off heart attacks by early detection of blood supply disorders.

They also would try to develop instruments to detect and treat heart ailments of children.

Under the accord, the two countries would exchange models of artificial hearts and other devices for testing and would publish the results of joint research efforts.

Under the housing and construction agreement, special efforts would be made to develop criteria for building in earthquake-prone areas and in regions effected by climatic extremes, such as arctic cold and desert heat.

The energy agreement called for a broad and balanced range of joint research and development programs on conventional and unconventional energy forms, environmental problems related to energy, and ways to restrain energy usage.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko signed the agreement on the artificial heart; Nixon and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin signed the agreement on housing; and Nixon and President Nikolai V. Podgorny signed the agreement on energy.

Brezhnev noted, however, that the process of detente has only "traversed the first stage," and that "much work lies ahead" that will require a sense of purpose and good will.

He also said the summit meetings were marked by "frankness," a diplomatic way of saying the two sides have major points of divergence.

Brezhnev also gave assurances there would be no "secret agreements," an apparent reference to a debate in the United States concerning allegations that so-called loopholes in the 1972 nuclear pact were later closed in secret negotiations.

Nixon called off his plan to visit Star City on Saturday to inspect the training of American and Soviet spacemen. White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the President and Brezhnev had decided to use the time "for working sessions, consultation and negotiations."

Nixon and Brezhnev got down to the business of their third summit meeting earlier in the day.

"We have a list that long," said Brezhnev, stretching his arms wide for an inquiring American newsmen. And first on it "is the strengthening of friendly relations."

"The main talks are just beginning today," said the Soviet leader as he waited for Nixon to arrive at his Kremlin office. "Basically, yesterday, we just exchanged speeches."

Nixon started his day with a trip to the tomb of the Soviet unknown soldier beneath the Kremlin wall to place the customary wreath. His arrival at Brezhnev's office was delayed 15 minutes when he made an unscheduled stop to shake hands with some of the hundreds of Russians watching from behind police barricades.

"Friendship!" one Russian woman shouted to the President.

"Peace and friendship," said another. "For everybody," said Nixon, "for the whole world, the Russian people and the American people."

With Nixon at the conference this morning were Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger; State Department counselor Helmut Sonnenfeldt, an arms specialist; Walter Stoessel, the U.S. ambassador to Moscow; William G. Hyland, director of the State Department Intelligence and Research Bureau, and Maj. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, a national security adviser on the presidential staff.

Flanking Brezhnev were President Nikolai Podgorny and Premier Alexei Kosygin, with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Anatoly F. Dobrynin, the Soviet ambassador to the United States, farther down the table.

The two leaders met privately—for only interpreters present—for 70 minutes shortly after the President and Mrs. Nixon began their visit Thursday. Aides said they mapped the agenda for Nixon's week-long stay and started negotiations toward limiting nuclear weapons and improving trade between their two countries.

Reorganization orders are signed by governor

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The plan streamlining the state's executive branch moved to the brink of implementation today as Gov. Christopher S. Bond signed the executive orders reorganizing much of state government.

"These executive orders are the culmination of the efforts of hundreds of individuals who have pursued the central objective of making Missouri government more efficient, effective and responsive," Bond said.

The process of reorganization began six years ago with the establishment of the reorganization Little Hoover Commission, which provided a model for use in development of the plan that will go into effect Monday. The numerous departments, commissions and agencies will be placed under 13 departments through the plan.

"The real work of reorganization, however, is just beginning," Bond said.

Getting ready

Robert Meyer, 7, had a difficult time Friday morning deciding what fireworks he wanted to buy at Molly Brown's Fireworks, just south of the city limits of Highway 65. His mother, Mrs. Doyle Meyer, Hughesville, said that Robert bought some Thursday but decided to come back for more. He spent all of his savings — $8. He picked out more than 10 varieties of fireworks. Mrs. Meyer said that Robert had promised to wait until July 4 to use the fireworks, but he said he didn't know if he would. The fireworks stand has been open more than a week and already sold over $1,500 worth of goods. Fireworks may not be used within the city limits of Sedalia.

Audit report presented

Pettis County government received a basically clean bill of health Friday from the state auditor's office.

The recently-completed audit of the county from Jan. 1, 1971, to Dec. 31, 1973, was reviewed with the County Court Friday morning by senior state auditors Ron Yates and Gene Stockton.

The auditors listed 10 recommendations that the County Court should follow. Outside of these recommendations, the report said, the officeholders of Pettis

County "have substantially complied" with state statutes.

The audit showed money shortages in the offices of the late Virgil Houchens, county treasurer, and the late Raymond Wilder, county collector. Both men died earlier this year.

Yates said the shortages were not the result of attempts to wrongfully take money from the county, but rather the result of bookkeeping errors and misinterpretation of state law.

The report said that Wilder had retained excess commissions and fees for the three years ending Feb. 28, 1974, in the amount of $1,965. The excess, Yates said, was the result of Wilder charging two commissions on delinquent taxes — regular and delinquent commissions.

The County Court said Friday morning it would request the money from Wilder's estate.

The report also showed that Houchens owes the county a total of $586 over the last eight years. Yates said this deficit was the result of bookkeeping errors, and termed the deficit "minor."

The court said it would also request this money from Houchens' estate.

The audit recommended that the County Court discontinue the funding of the Pettis County Fire Department from the general revenue fund. No authority is given the county courts in the state to fund this service out of the general revenue fund, the audit said.

Other recommendations were as follows:

✓ The County Court should make arrangements with the Missouri State Bank to assure that collateral pledged to cover county deposits is adequate at all times during the year. Securities collateral were insufficient at the bank in December, the audit disclosed.

✓ The County Court discontinue the practice of partially supporting the law library from the general revenue fund. The court spent $6,971 on the library in the last three years.

✓ The County Court discontinue paying for administrative expenses of public administrator Lloyd Farris. The expenses, Yates said, amounted to slightly more than $2,000 the last three years.

✓ Properly budget for all expenditures. In 1971 and 1972, the court paid special road and bridge fund expenses with general revenue funds without properly budgeting for the expenditures.

✓ Select one instead of four banks as

Break-in approval is denied by lawyer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House domestic counselor John D. Ehrlichman approved the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist the weekend before the break-in occurred, prosecutor William S. Merrill charged in court today.

Ehrlichman's lawyer, Henry H. Jones, denied that the former White House aide approved the break-in.

"Any breach of Dr. Fielding's rights came not as a result of the activity or knowledge of Mr. Ehrlichman," Jones said. "If it came at all, it came from some authority other than Mr. Ehrlichman."

Opening his case in the Plumbers trial, Merrill quoted Ehrlichman as saying in a phone call to White House subordinates about the then proposed break-in:

"Okay, let me know if they find anything."

Merrill said the phone call occurred Aug. 31, 1971, four days before the break-in at the office of Dr. Lewis J. Fielding, the Beverly Hills psychiatrist who treated Ellsberg.

Ellsberg subsequently was put on trial on charges stemming from the release of the Pentagon Papers but a federal judge dismissed the charges after learning among other things of the break-in at Fielding's office.

Merrill said Ehrlichman's approval was contingent only upon the covert operation not being traced to the White House.

Merrill said Ehrlichman's approval came in a phone call from Cape Cod, Mass., where he was vacationing, to David R. Young and Egil Krogh, who headed the White House investigative unit known as the Plumbers.

The trial opened on Wednesday and jury selection was completed late Thursday.

The opening defense statement for Ehrlichman is to be argued to the mostly black jury by Henry H. Jones, one of two black lawyers working for the former presidential assistant.

The other defendants are convicted Watergate conspirators G. Gordon Liddy, Bernard L. Barker and Eugenio L. Martinez.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell sped the jury selection process along Wednesday and Thursday, narrowing the pool to 90 persons he judged in closed court sessions to be sufficiently free of prejudicial bias for or against the defendants.

Review police probe behind closed doors

The Sedalia City Council discussed the two-month-old investigation of the Sedalia police department Thursday night in a closed meeting at the Municipal Building.

Following the meeting, which lasted less than an hour, Mayor Jerry Jones declined to comment on the extent of matters discussed, or on specific areas of the investigation.

He did say, however, that "there are still some areas that are being looked into."

He said there will be another meeting with the council regarding the investigation, but added that a "prescribed time" for the meeting has not been determined.

Jones also indicated that a report of the investigation will be provided when it is completed.

In his only other comment on Thursday night's meeting, Jones said, "We are trying to build a better law enforcement agency. We've got a good basis to build on and we're moving toward that objective."

Neither City Attorney Robert Liston, nor William F. Brown, the council's retained counsel, would comment on the meeting.

Liston and Jones have been serving as chief investigators in the probe.

The investigation was initiated by Jones in April, after he said he received complaints from persons alleging possible improprieties on the part of some police officers.

The city council formally sanctioned the investigation a month later after charges of ticket fixing and intimidation were made at a public hearing before the Police Personnel Board.

After assessor's study

By JACK SCHICHT
Democrat-Capitol Staff Writer

Local merchants and manufacturers will have to pay an average of 23 per cent more ad valorem taxes this year, according to Pettis County Assessor Bill McCune.

Figures released by the assessor's office show that county merchants and manufacturers in 1974 will pay taxes based on a total assessed valuation of $3,361,220, compared to last year's amount of $2,730,950.

The increase means the county, cities and school districts will receive a combined total of about $43,000 in additional revenue.

The ad valorem tax is levied annually against merchants and manufacturers on the amount of saleable merchandise, or inventory, on hand Jan. 1. The inventory does not include personal property or real estate.

McCune said in March that he was dissatisfied with the ad valorem taxes that some local businesses had been paying. Citing supermarkets as an example, McCune noted that similar stores were paying taxes on valuations varying from $54,540 to $8,000.

Unlike the real estate tax assessment, which is determined by the assessor's office, the store owner or businessman himself

Ask new trial in murder case

A motion for a new trial was filed in Pettis County Circuit Court Friday by Charles "Chuck" Brown, 53.

Brown was convicted May 22 by a Circuit Court jury of second-degree murder in the Jan. 22 shooting death of Richard Keith Boggs, 20, 108 East Cooper. Brown was sentenced to life in prison.

The motion, filed by Brown's attorney, James Buckley, asks for a new trial on the grounds that Circuit Court Judge Frank Meyer erred three times during the trial.

Brown was accused of shooting Boggs twice, once through the heart, with a .30 caliber M-1 carbine at Brown's home, 417 East St. Louis. Brown claimed he shot Boggs in self defense.

Buckley contended that Judge Meyer erred in failing to permit Buckley to cross examine the state's chief witness, Miss Gwendolyn Staten, 401 North Moniteau, about facts of Miss Staten's two previous felony convictions.

The information, Buckley said, would have aided the jury about the "callous nature of the witness." Miss Staten was the only eye-witness to the shooting. She admitted on the witness stand that she had previously been convicted of felony assault and forgery charges.

Buckley also contended that a statement made by Judge Meyer at the trial was prejudicial to Brown. The statement was made concerning testimony of defense witness Sylvester "Big Man" Johnson, Columbia.

Judge Meyer told the jury that Johnson's answer to a particular question was to be allowed "on a limit basis ... and not for the truth of the statement..." Such a comment, Buckley said, was prejudicial to the defendant because the jury could "hardly understand" the statement of the court that the testimony was not given for its truth.

By the comment, Buckley further (Please See ASK NEW, Page 4) determines his inventory and swears the amount is correct. The amount he determines is 30 per cent of the value.

McCune said he spent "about three or four days" personally visiting businesses who, in his opinion, have turned in tax statements that were too low. He said he didn't know how many he contacted.

In each case, McCune said, the businessman voluntarily raised his assessment when confronted with inventory amounts of similar businesses.

"Not a single merchant refused," McCune said. "No one did not cooperate."

The $630,270 increase over last year primarily is due to the voluntary assessment hikes, McCune said. He also pointed out, though, that the increase is partially due to the addition of 18 to 20 new businesses to the ad valorem books this year.

McCune in March had declared that the ad valorem tax was to be levied on the greatest amount of inventory on hand at any one time between January and April. However, he said he since discovered that the tax was to be based only on the inventory on hand Jan. 1.

To one local business, this discovery meant a tax break.

Catholic annulment system extended

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — American Roman Catholic bishops have won an extension by the Vatican of easier, faster matrimonial court procedures which have increased tenfold the number of annulments granted Catholics in this country.

The simplified system, first allowed on an experimental basis in 1970, had been ordered ended as of this June 30, but the order now has been lifted on appeal by the U.S. bishops.

Pope Paul VI decided to grant their petition for "the good of souls" by allowing continuation of the special procedure until a long-term project of revising Church canon law is completed, a Vatican letter advised.

Word of the turn-about assent resulted from the efforts of a six-man delegation sent to Rome in February by the U.S. bishops to plead with the Pope for extension of the liberalized rules.

Msgr. Stephen Kelleher, an authority on Church marriage law, told an ecumenical conference sponsored this month at Garrison, N.Y., that the number of annulments granted in this country has climbed from about 700 in 1969 to a current figure of about 7,000 annually.

Even this total is "only touching the tip of the iceberg," he added, noting conservative estimates that at least 100,000 Catholic marriages a year end in divorce, leaving those involved excluded from Communion if they remarry without a Church annulment of their prior union.

In Western Roman Catholicism, valid marriages are considered indissoluble. Divorce — except in rare instances — is not permitted. But marriages can be annulled if found invalid in the first place.

Moreover, the reasons for finding them invalid have expanded greatly to include various psychological factors including alcoholism, anxiety neurosis, immature personality, inadequate personality, passive-aggressive personality and simply "personality disorders."

In the past, the Church limited such grounds for annulment to cases in which a person lacked conscious free will — such as being coerced, being drunk and insane.

With the development of psychiatry and psychology, we are learning more and more about what constitutes a person to be a fit subject for marriage," he said.

He cited documentation of 25 different psychic causes for finding marriages null, including alcoholism, anxiety neurosis, immature personality, inadequate personality, passive-aggressive personality and simply "personality disorders."

In the past, the Church limited such grounds for annulment to cases in which a person lacked conscious free will — such as being coerced, being drunk and insane.

Evangelist to speak at three churches

Evangelist Richard Green, from Johannesburg, South Africa, and Enid, Okla., will speak at three Baptist churches Sunday.

Mr. Green also will be the special speaker at an area rally at Calvary Baptist Church at 8 p.m. Monday.

Everyone wants in on profits

NEW YORK (AP) — Another act in the oil-profits story may be developing, and the oil companies aren't looking forward to it.

You'll recall that profits last year and in the first few months of 1974 rose sharply. As the First National City Bank observes, earnings were widely hailed as dramatic "if not positively indecent."

The bank analyzed the statements of the 37 major oil companies based in the United States and found they were able to raise their net income by 55 per cent in 1973 and by an 81 per cent annual rate in the first quarter of 1974.

But there now seems to be a possibility that those profits could turn to losses, ironically because they attracted so much attention.

Among the threats to those profits are higher taxes and big wage demands, as government and labor seeks to share in what they believe is a financial bonanza.

Performance used to be advertised by the mutual funds. A good performer, one that might increase its net asset value 40 or 50 per cent in one year, found investor money flowing into its coffers.

You don't hear much about it anymore, and no more reasonable explanation can be supplied than to look at the performance records. They're generally poor.

Standard & Poor's has just issued its performance list and it shows that share assets of the 50 largest funds declined 11 per cent between the end of last year and May 31.

"Over-all, only about 42 per cent of the 412 funds monitored by S&P showed above-average results," it reported. That loss by the 50 largest funds, incidentally, exceeded the 10.5 per cent drop in the S&P 500-stock index.

You may have wondered how your neighbors make ends meet these days. The Conference Board, a private organization devoted to business and economic research, offers some explanation: More wives are working.

Participation in the labor force by women in the 25-to-54-year-old group rose sharply in the past two or three decades, it notes. In 1947 only 34 per cent were at work or seeking work; in 1973 some 52 per cent were so engaged.

Church group wants woman for a pastor

CHICAGO (AP) — A Chicago Methodist congregation that wants a woman pastor has rejected its bishop's appointment of a man.

A member of the Parish of the Holy Covenant explained Wednesday that the congregation "felt we had to take a stand because women are not getting support" from the Methodist Church.

But United Methodist Bishop Paul A. Washburn says the congregation can't refuse the appointment because "the act is not provided for in the law of the Methodist Church."

And the Rev. Charles Peterson, named to the position three weeks ago but yet to assume it, says he's marking time until the dispute is "worked out between the bishop and the church."

For the past two weeks, congregation members have taken over the Sunday worship services and daily functions of the parish, says the Rev. Donald Elmer, a minister member of the congregation not assigned to the church.

He says the parish first requested a woman minister this spring when its pastor of 14 years announced his retirement.

"We had good experiences with several women seminarians over the past two years, and we decided having a woman pastor now would encourage women in the church," said the Rev. Mr. Elmer, whose wife is a codirector of a national Methodist group to advance women's rights in society and the church.

He said the congregation "wanted someone with experience — not a woman just for the sake of having a woman." He said women, who make up less than 1 per cent of Methodist pastors, "have traditionally been placed in the smaller, rural churches where they have little career mobility."

But the Rev. Mr. Elmer said that instead of taking the congregation's request seriously the church "kept coming up with rules and regulations" and didn't even try to find a woman pastor.

Bishop Washburn maintains he "appointed the Reverend Peterson and that's where things stand."

"We're at a standoff now," the Rev. Mr. Elmer said. "We've been told it's none of our business and that it's the bishop's business. We think that's wrong, but we don't want a confrontation. We want to work this out within the church."

Lutheran president says 'it is a time for...action'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The church travels high country and low. It bears a dream but labors in the dust.

That is the image of it held up by the president of the nation's largest Lutheran body on the eve of its biennial convention.

The church's obligation is to clarify "the relationship between the heavenly vision and the earthly servanthood," says the Rev. Dr. Robert J. Marshall, president of the Lutheran Church in America.

In a presidential report to the convention July 3-10 in Baltimore, he says believers today need a sharpened awareness of the inseparable ties between faith and responsible work in the world.

"It is a time for vision to be matched with action," he said.

Not only that, he says, but with growing skepticism about political leadership and with an economic enterprise that threatens to deplete natural resources and allow some people to starve while others grow fat, Christians must recognize they are answerable to God for their social institutions, as well as their personal lives.

"In just such a time, there needs to be a vision that Christ is Lord of all," he adds.

Dr. Marshall, 55, an Old Testament scholar, former pastor, one-time seminary professor and head of the 3.1 million-member denomination for six years, says the church today is "threatened, but still serving."

Besides the necessity of focusing devotion to God on tending his earthly creation and its institutions, Dr. Marshall says the church also faces the challenge of striking a balance between age-old conflicting drives in humanity, starkly evident in modern society.

He says it must "continue the struggle between permissiveness and responsibility, hoping to avoid... chaos and anarchy on the one side and legalism, false certainty, rigidity and tyranny on the other."

Dr. Marshall faces a contest for the presidency at the convention, the first time for such a challenge to an incumbent church president.

The Rev. Dr. Wallace E. Fisher, a Lancaster, Pa., pastor, is seeking the post, and has campaigned in several church regional synods, with plans to meet with several delegations in Baltimore prior to scheduled voting Wednesday.

He also is seeking to maneuver a speaking spot on the convention program prior to the election. He contends the church administration has fostered a "management style" that isolates it from congregations.

WHAT OUR PEOPLE SAY ABOUT JESUS

I am 39 years old. During my life time I have attended many churches, including Baptist, Methodist, Catholic, Lutheran and others. While going to church I was seeking for something, but I was never able to pin down what it was. Somehow as I attended churches there never seemed to be the fulfillment that I was seeking.

I was never an immoral or wicked man. Yet I held the philosophy of living only for myself. I had heard many pastors use Bible terms and speak of living forever with the Lord. Yet no one had ever really set down with me and explained to me how I could know that I was going to go to heaven if I were to die.

About three months ago Pastor Allen came to our home and took the Bible and showed us how to be saved. I was ready and wanted to be saved. My wife and I both trusted Christ as our Saviour. I guess the Holy Spirit had just worked and decided that it was time for us to be saved.

My regret is that I never trusted Christ sooner. I see now that many of the years of my life that were lived for myself, could have been lived for God.

Since I have received Christ the biggest change in my life is in my attitudes. I look at life differently. I'm happier and more relaxed. So many people today are having breakdowns and problems in their lives. They are looking for ways out of these problems and are turning to drugs, alcohol, and other things. If they would only realize that when you come to Jesus you don't need these crutches. You have Him and His Word and you know where you're going. It's the first time I ever had real direction in my life.

Four Things That GOD Wants EVERYONE To Know

ALL MEN ARE SINNERS — "As it is written, There is none righteous, no not one; There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God." Romans 3:10, 11.

THERE IS A PENALTY FOR SIN — "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Romans 5:12.

GOD HAS PROVIDED A WAY OF SALVATION — "But God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Romans 5:8.

SALVATION COMES BY ASKING GOD FOR IT — "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." Romans 10:9, 13.

argued, the jury "could well have considered that the testimony about Gwendolyn Staten was not true and that Sylvester Johnson was not telling the truth."

The last argument contends that Judge Meyer erred in failing to give conditional statements on a self defense instruction to the jury. Buckley said the instruction given the jury did not contain a paragraph which is required by law.

The paragraph would have told the jury that if Boggs prior to the killing made threats which were known by or communicated to the defendant, then the jurors could consider such threats as explaining the conduct or apprehensions of Brown at the time of the killing. The instruction also would have told the jurors that they could consider the threats for the purpose of determining who the aggressor was at the time of the killing.

Brown at the trial said he was told that Boggs, the night he was killed, might be carrying a firearm to Brown's apartment to cause trouble. Brown also testified he shot Boggs after he saw Boggs reach for a gun in his waist area. No gun was found on Boggs.

Buckley said the instruction would have guided the jury in its deliberation as to whether Boggs was the aggressor at the time prior to the shooting.

Buckley also said that the jury should have been given a statement in the instruction that self defense could be determined "if the defendant did not provoke the use or threat of force against himself." The sentence, Buckley said, sets forth the basic law under which the defendant was entitled to act in self defense.

Both statements, Buckley said, should have been submitted in the instructions by Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming and Assistant State Attorney General Neil MacFarlane, and should have been given by Judge Meyer.

School tax levy increase sought

(Democrat-Capital Service)

GREEN RIDGE — Voters in the Green Ridge R-8 School District will go the polls July 25 to decide the fate of a proposed 35-cent increase in the school's operating levy.

The proposal, if approved by a simple majority, would bring the district's levy to $3.50 per $100 assessed valuation. The levy now stands at $3.15.

Superintendent Leland Foster said the levy increase is needed for three reasons: (1) To combat inflation; (2) To compensate for "growing pains;" and (3) To meet state AA educational requirements.

Foster said that without the increase, the school will expend $20,000 in deficit spending next year.

Foster pointed out under the first reason that fuel, heating and transportation costs rose 150 per cent last year over the previous school year.

He also noted, referring to the second reason, that additional materials and equipment are needed to adequately furnish recently remodeled sections of the school and to furnish two new special education classes that will begin next year.

Citing the third reason, Foster said the school hopes by 1976 to meet state requirements for a AA rating. The school presently has a single A rating. These new requirements call for an expanded school library.

Foster also pointed out additional expenses. The school, he said, will have to buy another school bus in the near future at a cost of $8,000 to $9,000. Transportation costs also will increase, he said, when the school district begins sending pupils to vocational and technical classes at State Fair Community College. And another $8,000 to $9,000 is being spent now to rewire and remodel the vocational-agricultural building.

Foster stressed that the levy is needed not only to meet increased costs of next year, but also to meet "the additional expenses we will incur over the next several years."

The last increase in the operating levy was in the spring of 1968 when voters approved a 19-cent increase that raised the levy from $2.66 to $2.85, Foster said.

He also said that in 1972 voters approved a levy increase of 30 cents to $3.15 to buy bonds to finance construction of a new gymnasium and to remodel the old gymnasium into classrooms and an elementary school gymnasium.

Approval of the levy increase also will enable the district to obtain an additional $7,500 in state funds, Foster said.

George R. Smith College cornerstone found here

The cornerstone of the George R. Smith College, one of the first black institutions north of the old Mason-Dixon Line and where Scott Joplin studied music, was placed on the front lawn of the city library Friday morning.

The cornerstone was donated to the Scott Joplin Ragtime Festival by Norman Huffman, Washington and Clay, after it was uncovered on his land Wednesday by Larry Melton, coordinator of the festival, and Ron Jennings.

Huffman owns the property where the college was located, immediately west of Crown Hill Cemetery. The college was founded in 1888 and burned April 26, 1925.

The inscription on the one-ton piece of limestone reads "George R. Smith College, May 31, 1893." The artifact is the cornerstone for the college's main building which was completed in 1894.

The cornerstone was hoisted to the library from Huffman's property by use of a wrecker.

Commenting on the discovery, Melton said "this cornerstone will be an invaluable addition to the authentic Joplin-era memorabilia collection for the festival. We have the original Maple Leaf Club calling card, the original contract agreement between Joplin and John Stark for "The Maple Leaf Rag," and how this. We're just elated."

Joplin was lured to Sedalia, in part, by the prospects of attending the college. While a student there he studied music.

Huffman said he readily donated the Injuries result from accident

Two persons were injured at about 3 p.m. Thursday in a collision involving a car and a tractor-trailer on Highway 50 one mile west of Highway 127.

According to the Highway Patrol, the accident occurred as a 1971 Dodge, driven by George Winkler, 81, Warrensburg, ran out of gas while headed east on Highway 50.

The Winkler vehicle stopped in the eastbound lane and an International tractor-trailer, driven east by Dale Hutcherson, 45, Mountain View, Mo., collided with the Winkler car, the patrol said.

Hutcherson was released from Bothwell Hospital after being treated for minor lacerations, bruises and abrasions.

Winkler was admitted to Johnson County Memorial Hospital, Warrensburg, where he was treated for lacerations, bruises, abrasions and internal injuries.

No arrests were made in connection with the accident, the patrol said.

Norris is released from hospital here

Dr. T. J. Norris, 1110 South Warren, former superintendent of Sedalia public schools for 15 years, Friday was released from Bothwell Hospital after suffering a heart attack June 8.

Dr. Norris, who has suffered previous heart attacks, was initially in the hospital's intensive care ward. For the last year, he has served as elementary school principal at Sweet Springs.

McCune said the Tempo store had turned in an assessment of more than $300,000, based on the old formula. The store's assessment, however, was reduced when the inventory Jan. 1 was found to yield an assessment of only $138,000.

McCune said he paid special attention to food stores, car dealerships, jewelry stores and shoe stores for his personal visits.

McCune's statistics were broken down by Sedalia businesses and manufacturers and non-Sedalia businesses and manufacturers.

In 1973, the total of the Sedalia ad valorem tax was $2,278,990. This year shows an increase of $502,390 to $2,781,380.

In the county, the increase was $127,880, from a 1973 figure of $451,960 to $579,840.

The ad valorem tax is levied by Pettis County cities, including Sedalia, as well as the county.

World grain estimates juggled again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reduced prospects for 1974 wheat harvests in the Soviet Union and the United States have prompted further juggling of anticipated world grain supplies, but government experts say granaries still will have enough to meet demands.

The Agriculture Department, in a new analysis issued Thursday, said world wheat output in the year beginning July 1 now is expected to total 369 million metric tons. That was down 5.5 million tons from a USDA estimate made 10 days earlier.

Officials said world production of feed grains—corn, barley, oats and sorghum—will decline to 623.6 million tons, down 2.4 million from estimates made June 17.

But the report, compiled by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, also showed wheat "consumption" — meaning grain used to feed livestock as well as humans — will decline to 366.7 million tons in the year ahead, down 4 million from expectations 10 days earlier.

A USDA spokesman said less wheat will be needed to feed Russian livestock accounting for most of the decline in prospective world consumption.

Wheat reserves held by the major exporting nations—Canada, Australia, Argentina and the United States—were estimated to total 33.1 million tons a year from now. That is up slightly from the previous outlook.

The report took into account revisions earlier this week in Soviet and U.S. crop production for 1974. Analysts said then that the Russian wheat crop would be down 5 million tons from the previous forecast but that larger output of corn and other feed grains would offset that decline.

Another analysis this week indicated U.S. wheat production would be down nearly 500,000 metric tons from original projections, accounting for the remainder of the decline forecast in Thursday's world grain report.

State, local law agencies probed over wiretapping

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe said today that the Justice Department is conducting several major investigations of possibly illegal wiretapping and bugging carried out by state and local law enforcement agencies.

Saxbe mentioned the investigations in a speech to the City Club of Cleveland but did not disclose the states or cities involved.

He said the probes demonstrate the department's concern about stopping illegal wiretapping by law enforcement officials and private individuals.

Saxbe said, "It is impossible to accurately gauge the extent of illegal electronic surveillance in the nation, since it is an activity that by its very nature is clandestine."

But he said there are signs of increasing attempts to "creep into our daily lives" with electronic eavesdropping.

He cited a recent Maryland case in which an automobile dealer bugged booths where customers were discussing potential purchases privately.

Federal law prohibits a private citizen from engaging in electronic surveillance except when he is a party to the conversation.

Women caucusing on politics

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The National Women's Political Caucus opened a three-day conference here today to try and strengthen the organization to meet the demands of thousands of women who responded to its call to run for public office.

In part, the Caucus has been a victim of its own success.

Next week, the Caucus will celebrate its third birthday and count about 36,000 members in 50 states.

It was started in mid-1971 by 271 women including such names as Gloria Steinem and Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., who urged women to run for office and end male domination of politics.

Thousands of women took them seriously and did just that.

In Texas alone, 2400 women sought local offices this year and the number of state-wide and congressional candidates has doubled in the past two years. But money—and the lack of it—has been a conspicuous hindrance to women candidates generally and to the caucus which hoped to nurture them.

The caucus played a significant role in the large increase of women delegates to both national political conventions in 1972 but its public image grew faster than its budget.

It has had hardly a solvent day since its founding, let alone been able to carry out its ideas for such candidate assistance as seminars on fund raising.

Women running for local offices, voluntary foot soldiers often are more important than large budgets, have had a far greater success ratio than women going after state-wide or congressional offices where lack of money is a big barrier.

Many delegates saw the conference here, and specifically its decision on structural improvements and a dues increase, as the crucial factor in whether the caucus will survive to help women become viable candidates in a world where political money and savvy is still cornered by men.

"I don't think people grasp the enormity of what has happened to women in politics the last two years," said Mako Miller, a Caucus steering committee member from Casper, Wyo., who also is state vice chairman of the Democratic party.

"Now it is simply a question of finding the financing," she said.

"We're terribly timid and afraid to ask for money," said the convention coordinator Dr. Kay Camin, an economics professor at Wichita State University.

Pat Keefer, a convention participant who works at Common Cause in Washington, said women traditionally have been at a loss in identifying sources of money for their political campaigns.

"They'll try to run on $15 to $25 donations," she said.

Some caucus members fear higher dues than the current $1 minimum would be undemocratic because they would hurt poor women.

Second church is illegally entered

New Hope Baptist Church, 664 East 16th, was broken into sometime early Friday morning, the second such incident this week.

Police reported they found a window and door open at the church. However, after a check by the Rev. Dean Catlett, pastor, it was determined nothing was taken from the church. Earlier this week, Calvary Baptist Church, 16th and Quincy, was entered. No theft occurred in this case either, police said.

In other police news, Terry Lee Martin, 2115 East Seventh, told police that someone shot the windshield of his car while he was sitting in the vehicle at 1500 South Limit Thursday night. Martin said the shot apparently was fired from a passing car. He set damage at $100.

Cheryl Hamilton, 1208 South Osage, told police she lost $350 in cash at a local supermarket. She said the money, consisting of 17 $20 bills, one $5 bill and five $1 bills, was in a purse that she evidently left in the store. She said she noticed the purse had been forgotten, went back to the store and discovered the purse missing.

Draftee
total at 25,000

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is down to its last 25,000 draftees.

This represents only about 3 per cent of the Army's strength.

Draftees will be completing their two-year service and leaving the Army at the rate of about 5,000 a month during the summer and fall. Only a few will be left in uniform after that. But the last 85 draftees will not be discharged until June of next year.

Legal authority to induct men into the armed services died almost a year ago, July 1, 1973, but the Pentagon stopped issuing mass draft calls six months earlier than that.

In the last half year before the induction authority expired, virtually the only men drafted were reservists who had failed to meet their obligations.

Only the Army drew on the draft for manpower in recent years, although some of those who enlisted in the Marine Corps, Navy and Air Force were considered draft-motivated.

After a tough, uphill struggle, the Army topped its monthly enlistment goal in May and manpower officials say they believe it can continue to do so without sacrificing quality.

The Marines, however, have been unable to attract enough high school graduates to meet congressional requirements.

Because of the Marine problem, Pentagon officials said that total U.S. military manpower will fall about 6,000 short of the 2,174,121 figure planned for the end of the fiscal year that ends Sunday.

Some congressmen remain skeptical that the all-volunteer concept will work over the long term. But Congress has helped the Pentagon reach its all-volunteer goal by cutting the size of the armed forces to its smallest level since before the Korean War.

With the high school year ended, the Pentagon is looking for a surge of enlistments in the summer months. For June alone, it raised its goal to 44,520, up by more than 50 per cent over May.

Jerry Reed one of 'new breed' of country artists

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer-guitarist Jerry Reed graduated from country to national stardom because of network TV, but his Music Row headquarters here is still just a plain, white wood frame house.

You need the address to find it. There's no sign outside.

The proprietor, a regular this spring on NBC's since-canceled "Music Country U.S.A.," is equally surprising in the flesh.

Where some top performers here might cite only old-time country artists as their main musical influences, Reed, a fine guitarist, readily claims the late jazz guitarist Django Reinhardt as one of his.

Mention Lenny Breau, an obscure, legendary Canadian known mainly to plectrum pros, and Reed lights up like Christmas: "Greatest guitar player I've ever heard, and I've heard some guitar players."

In short, Reed, a tanned, wiry native of Decatur, Ga., is among what Glen Campbell calls the "new breed" of country performers — artists equally at home not only in country music, but also jazz, blues and pop.

Like Campbell, who gave him his first network break on CBS in 1969, Reed is what you'd call a "crossover," a country performer accepted by country and noncountry music fans alike.

Surprisingly, Reed doesn't want a weekly country music show of his own on network TV. "I don't like people to see it every time they want to see it," Reed said, sipping a cola drink in the small, eight-track office recording studio he uses to try out new song ideas or hear those of others.

"I like to keep it important. Put it on network TV week in, week out, you're overdoing it. The name of the ball game is going out and visiting those people. Fairs, concerts, that's where it's at."

Starring in specials is another matter, he said: "Now you're gettin' down to the nitty-gritty, talkin' my kind of language."

However, he laughed, "if I do a show, I'm going to call the shots because I'm the one who stands to lose the battle, the war. It'll be my head that'll roll or my career that'll suffer. "The network'll always get another horse to ride."

Hearnes considering U.S. Senate

CHARLESTON, Mo. (AP) — Warren E. Hearnes, out of politics since leaving the Missouri governor's mansion in 1973, is giving thoughts to a U.S. Senate race in 1976.

He said from his home here Thursday he will make a decision next year whether to seek the seat held by Sen. Stuart Symington since 1953. Both are Democrats.

"I have the greatest respect for Senator Symington," said Hearnes, who is 50. "It is hard to say what he will do or won't do. At the same time I've got to consider my own ability and the years I have left to serve the state."

There has been speculation among some Democrats that Symington, 73, will retire at the end of his third term and the seat will be sought by his son, Rep. James W. Symington, D-Mo.

Speculation also has included Rep. Jerry Litton, D-Mo.

Earlier this year, after rejecting suggestions he bid for the seat held by Sen. Thomas Eagleton — who is up for reelection this year — John C. Danforth, Missouri attorney general, indicated he might seek Symington's seat in 1976.

Danforth challenged Symington in 1970 and lost by about 37,000 votes.

Scott Joplin music is heard by Kiwanians

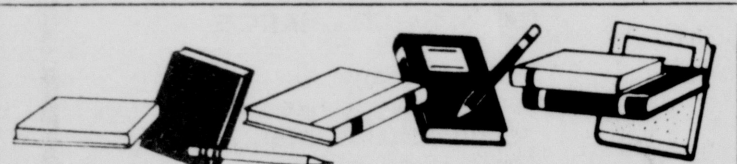

Kiwanians heard a varied sampling of Scott Joplin compositions at their meeting Thursday noon at the Bothwell Hotel.

Randy Schib, Ottumville, played several rags to illustrate Joplin's various stylistic approaches. He also performed "Solace," Joplin's only tango, made popular by the motion picture "The Sting."

Schib is a music student at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Rhonda Siefert, also from Ottumville, was a guest of Sylvan Woolery, who introduced the program in the absence of Bill Giles.

It was announced that Bob Fritz, immediate past president of Kiwanis, was one of 25 Kiwanis presidents in the Missouri-Arkansas District cited as "distinguished" for the 1972-73 club year. The honor is based on several indicators of club activities and accomplishments.

Student reports

David Joseph Fischer, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Fischer, 3916 East 12th, and a sophomore at the University of Missouri-Columbia, will participate in "An Italian Straw Hat," as part of the University's Summer Repertory Theater.

Performances of the play are scheduled for July 6, 8, 11, 16, 19, 24, 27 and 29, with curtain time scheduled for 8 p.m. on each day. Performances will be held on the University Theater Mainstage.

Body shirts pose a tight problem

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — I have a Pet Peeve or do I have a Pet Peeve? Please explain why women, not many men, always say "My house" and my this or that when they are married and have families. It seems they would realize that were it not for their spouses they might not have what they do. This really rubs me the wrong way.

I would also like to tell the readers how I repaired the worn front on MY silk quilted house coat that was in excellent condition otherwise. It was frayed down the front, along the right side, so I bought a piece of inch-wide nylon ribbon and pinned it along this side all the way down the front with half the ribbon's width on the back and half on the front. It does not interfere with the buttonholes and made my house coat look like new again. I stitched this on by hand using small blind stitches and it really looks as if it had been bought that way. — MRS. K.

DEAR POLLY — I want tell Mrs. H.E.N. that greeting postcards ARE available. I ordered some from a mail order gift catalogue and used them last Christmas. These cards have various attractive decorations. Those I used had Christmas greetings and religious pictures symbolic of the season.

Anne W.'s most helpful hint about using talcum powder on the hands when working with shredded foam (stuffing pillows, etc.) prompts me to include another helpful use for talcum or bath powder. Try using it when sewing on foam-backed materials. It works like magic. — INEZ.

DEAR POLLY — I was recently elected to put new grout in some seams in the bathroom tile. I have done this many ways but this time found a neat and easy way and it should stay in well. The grout was squirted into the seams and smoothed with a MOISTENED finger. This was less messy and the grout went way into the seam. A decorating bag also would be fine and good practice makes for a steady hand. — JANET.

DEAR POLLY — Before pulling on a sweater, tank top or any other over-the-head garment I always made a big cuff (turning the inside up) on the bottom of the top being put on. This prevents body powder, deodorant residue stains, etc., from getting on the front of a clean garment. — SUSAN.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — What can be done to loosen too-tight arm bands on body shirts that fit perfectly every place else. I am desperate. So many of my shirts are like this. — JOANNE.

Police dust off ordinance of 1901

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A city ordinance passed here in 1901 is a vehicle for arresting "unattended" women on the streets or in public places at night "without giving a good account of themselves."

It was dusted off by police recently when 17 women—18 to 31 years of age—were arrested at a night club and charged with violating the ordinance.

A civil liberties lawyer says the law is questionable. Some women are more graphic in describing their attitudes about it. "I don't like women's lib, but that law is ridiculous," said Kathy Howell, 18, when asked about the ordinance. "What if there aren't enough guys to go around? I'd be sitting at home if I couldn't go out without a guy."

A female bartender at one nightclub said, "I'd sure like to get thrown in the can for being without a man." Most of the women who come to the place are unescorted, she said. "I'd like to see them try to arrest a man for being unescorted."

Lt. Bill E. Dillon, acting commander of the vice squad, says the law was designed to combat prostitution. It is an alternative, he said, for ridding the streets of prostitutes who, for lack of evidence, could not be charged on prostitution charges.

Although the wording of the ordinance gives police the legal right to arrest any unaccompanied woman in public places at night, that "would clearly be missing the intent of the law," he said.

Arthur Benson II, general counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union of Western Missouri—which includes this city in Kansas—feels the ordinance restricts the First Amendment freedom of assembly and denies due process of law because it is vague.

A similar ordinance in neighboring Kansas City, Mo., was declared unconstitutional last year by the Jackson County Circuit Court, he said.

The 17 women arrested for violating the ordinance, free on $1,000 bonds, are scheduled to appear in municipal court July 24.

New member

John Killion, Hughesville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Killion, recently became the 50,000th member of the Missouri Farm Bureau. Farming in partnership with his father, Killion is also a custom anhydrous applicator. He was presented with a trophy and membership plaque. A former student at New Mexico State University, Las Cruces, N.M., he is engaged to Miss Bonnie Heerman, a graduate nurse employed at Bothwell Hospital.

CWA passes impeachment resolution

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A resolution passed by some 2,000 delegates at the Communications Workers of America convention here calls for the House Judiciary Committee to promptly deliver a bill of impeachment to the House floor.

The resolution, drawing only scattered opposition Thursday in a hand count, also called on the House to then "move forward decisively to vote on the merits of the case in order that the nation may end its most serious crisis in the near future."

George M. Miller, an executive vice president of the union, which represents about 575,000 members nationwide—a majority of them employees of the Bell Telephone Company—said: "We could never have passed this resolution last year. It's just a change that has really swept through the union. I'd say the changes have come about in the last four months."

Miller said 70 per cent of the delegates responding to a questionnaire felt there is enough evidence to conclude the impeachment inquiry now. Forty per cent feel the President is guilty or should be found guilty of impeachable offenses, he said.

Poultry should be wrapped loosely when it is stored in the refrigerator, tightly when it is stored in the freezer.

Nuclear arms options not revealed by Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger and the military chiefs are in the dark as to what specific nuclear arms limitation proposals President Nixon will push with Soviet leaders, Pentagon sources say.

The recommendations of Schlesinger and the Joint Chiefs of Staff were presented at a National Security Council meeting presided over by Nixon last Friday.

But sources say Nixon and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger left for Europe on Tuesday without telling defense leaders what options the President has decided to exercise in his Moscow negotiations.

This, along with reports of differences between Schlesinger and Kissinger, raised doubts as to whether a "harmonious national position" was achieved, as Schlesinger predicted it would be.

Officials decline to discuss the Pentagon's recommendations. But it is known the military chiefs are opposed to extension of the present temporary Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) agreement without changes beyond its 1977 expiration date.

The chiefs, and other senior defense officials, believe this would leave the Russians free to exploit their advantage in numbers of missiles by deploying newly developed launchers armed with big nuclear-tipped multiple warheads (MIRVs) numbering in the thousands.

This, they feel, would threaten to tip the balance against the United States, which has seen its qualitative advantage in MIRVs start to fade since the temporary SALT agreement was signed about two years ago.

Schlesinger has indicated he would go along with an "agreement in principle" to limit deployment of advanced missiles with multiple warheads. But Schlesinger has said such an agreement would have to be safeguarded with means for verification to protect against cheating.

Key Pentagon officials widely hold that the Russians will not get down to real give-and-take bargaining until the last year of the temporary agreement, that they see no need to rush into another interim pact with possible hazards.

Defense officials began to grow concerned about prospects for real progress last fall when, they say, Russian negotiators took a hard line.

In essence, as these officials tell it, the Russians wanted to put stringent limits on all kinds of U.S. nuclear weaponry but refused to consider further curbs on their missile arsenal.

including size and "throw weight."

Concern in the Pentagon escalated when Kissinger traveled to Moscow last March in search of a "conceptual breakthrough" to pave the way for a possible permanent SALT agreement during Nixon's visit.

Although the breakthrough did not materialize, some Pentagon officials still are worried that Kissinger might be inclined to make compromises that could be detrimental, and that Nixon would agree in eagerness to score an apparent diplomatic triumph.

This worry appears to have abated in recent weeks, particularly after Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., publicly warned Nixon against any "quick cosmetic agreement."

Shooting victim is defended

ST. LOUIS (AP)—“He couldn't hold a glass of water, much less a gun.”

That was how a neighbor described 59-year-old John Patrick, who was shot and killed Tuesday night by a police detective looking for three escaped convicts from a city hospital prison ward.

Plainclothes detectives burst into Patrick's home after receiving a tip that the escapees could be found there. Det. Donald Hardy shot Patrick twice after the man allegedly pointed a shotgun at him.

The convicts were not found. But a neighbor, Kelly Winston, said Patrick, who suffered from diabetes and arthritic and heart conditions, never had a chance.

“I told them (police) maybe I could talk to him and get him out. They didn't say anything at all. When Hardy hit on the door, he said, ‘You know who this is. This is Hardy.’ It took them two seconds to kick the door in. They went in and killed him like a dog.”

'Pure nudity' no cause for arrest

VENICE, Calif. (AP) — The lifeguard strolled out of his station 200 yards from the cresting waves, glanced around at about 200 naked men and women and sighed, “Yep, it's going to be a fun summer.”

It has been that way all year for Randy Steigley, a guard for six years on the heavily used beach in this Los Angeles district. The guys and gals have been taking off their clothes and authorities have been looking the other way.

“We've told the police that if the activity is pure nudity and nothing else... we don't feel there's any violation of state law and we have no desire to make arrests,” said Asst. Los Angeles City Atty. Dave Perez.

Councilman Arthur Snyder is trying to change things, however. He asked the Los Angeles city attorney's office to draft legislation this week and today the Police, Fire and Civil Defense Committee holds a public hearing on a proposed ordinance prohibiting beach nudity. Snyder heads the committee.

Even with committee approval, the bill would require at least 10 votes of the 15-member council to become law. Sources close to City Hall feel the bill hasn't got the necessary votes.

Steigley, 23, said Wednesday that more than 10,000 bathers and sightseers flocked last Sunday to his stretch of Venice sands, a flat, open beach adjacent to a residential area.

“Yeah, it was wall-to-wall people from this station to that

New hope for Kansas City School District

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City School District, in a financial quandary after a levy increase proposal failed on June 11, has new hope for funds as the result of action by the City Council.

Acting on pleas made earlier by the school board, the council voted Thursday to place a proposed one-half cent increase in the city sales tax on the Aug. 6 primary election ballot. The ordinance scheduling the issue does not state where the funds will be directed, but the council indicated its intention.

The money generated, an estimated $10 million, would be for the schools, including other districts within the city. Kansas City district schools were shut down for a month and a half during the spring by a teachers' strike.

Ann Landers

He was in love — until seeing her legs

Dear Ann Landers: I am not a teen-ager. I'm a mature man who has been wanting to get married for the last two years. Please remember this when you respond to my letter.

I met Miss G. at a summer resort seven months ago. We had a marvelous time together and shared a lot in common when it came to religion, education, economic status and even political interests.

We live 50 miles apart and see each other nearly every weekend. G. has a nice figure and always wears pantsuits or long dresses. I must say she has some great outfits and people frequently comment on her excellent taste in clothes.

Yesterday, for the first time, G. wore a knee-length dress and I saw her legs. It was a shock. They were terrible. I don't mean just heavy, but gross. I had a difficult time concealing my surprise. I felt almost betrayed — as if she had been hiding them from me.

I admit my feelings toward her have soured a bit and now I need to know if you think I could be happy married to this woman. We have talked about marriage from time to time and I'm sure she'd like very much to be my wife. What do you say?

— Don't Know Now
Dear D.K.N.: For heaven's sake, do the girl a favor and stop seeing her at once. She'd be a fool to waste another minute on a sap like you.

From now on, you ought to insist that any girl you ask out wear a dress (or maybe shorts) on the second date. You could gather all the “vital statistics” at once and not waste your time — or hers.

Dear Ann Landers: I was struck by that letter from the teen-ager whose mother found her diary which caused so much grief in the family. You said, “Never put anything in writing that might cause pain or disappointment if it should be read ‘accidentally.’” That was astute advice, Ann, and I hope somebody listens.

Right now I'm suffering the tortures of the damned because after 15 years of what I thought was a good marriage, I ran into my wife's old diary. It was under a box of family pictures in the storage room. After reading just a few pages I became sick to my stomach. I learned she was having a sizzling affair all the time we were engaged. She slept with a guy (who was an usher at our wedding) three days before she married me. Our son was born exactly nine months after our marriage and now I'm not sure I fathered that child.

I feel betrayed and cheated. It's increasingly difficult to control my anger and hostility. I've talked with my priest and he advised me to forgive and forget, that it doesn't matter now, and to be thankful for the good years we've had together.

My wife doesn't know I read her diary and I need your advice. Should I tell her? I can't go on living this way. — Derailed in Bloomfield Hills

Dear D.: By all means discuss this situation with your wife at once. Bottled emotions are like a time bomb. The ultimate explosion can be extremely damaging. Go back to your priest for additional counseling and reassurance. He has given you good advice. In the meantime, are you listening, students?

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Teenager has tobacco habit

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am a 15-year-old chain smoker, and I've been smoking cigarettes since I was in the eighth grade. (I am now in the 10th.) At first I did it to be "cool." But now I just can't stop! No matter how I try, I went to Florida with my parents in the summer. We drove down. On the way there, I had no urge for a cigarette for one week. Then I met these other girls. They had cigarettes, and I got the nicotine fits. So naturally I took advantage of and had a few "butts."

I usually never buy cigarettes, because I'm low on cash. I'm what you might call a "grubber." Why can't I stop? I want to so much it's pitiful. Please Dr. Lamb, you're the only doctor I've consulted about this. So, I hope you'll be able to help me! I want to be a healthy human being again! They say on television to stay away from the people who smoke and places where you usually smoke. I don't see how that will help. All I think it would do is lose your friends and cause you to stay home when you've got the chance to go out. I feel like a dope addict. Please help me.

Dear Reader — I wish I could help you, but the person who has to help you is YOU! The first requirement to quitting smoking is to really want to do so. That means wanting to quit bad enough to forego some of life's pleasures for a while.

It looks like you could quit if you can go a week. That is a good sign you are not that badly hooked — YET! There is still time for you to do something about it.

Since it is summer you could easily avoid social situations that caused you to be exposed to other people who smoke. You don't have to go to school, and you can discipline yourself to stay from social contacts for a couple of weeks.

Yes, you will still have the urge, but it will not be so overwhelming after two weeks, and you can learn some self-control.

Perhaps your parents will take you on a trip to make it easier for you. If you are alone, learn to do something constructive with your hands so you can be occupied. You might learn a new hobby like needlepoint.

There are a number of devices on the market that will help ease the pain of quitting. These include tablets that help kill the desire for nicotine in cigarettes. Then there are devices that cut down on the amount of nicotine you get in cigarette gradually, these are filter-like device. You could probably quit "cold turkey" if you really wanted to do so though, since you have already demonstrated that you don't miss it for a week when you are not in a social setting that includes smoking.

Remember that after that first initial period of stopping smoking you can't ever smoke again, not even one cigarette. The mistake many people make is to be off a week or even longer and then think they can smoke just one cigarette, or in your case, just one scrounged butt. In no time they are back on the habit. It's really up to you. If you think you need some additional help you might see your family doctor, but I'm pretty sure you could quit on your own if you really make up your mind to do it. You are a good example to other young people of just what the cigarette habit can lead to.

No CIA 'plot' in Watergate operations

WASHINGTON — Once again, in banner headlines, we are slapped with the theory that the Watergate burglary and the Ellsberg break-in were part of a plot conceived and executed by the cloak-and-dagger boys of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Rowan

This time we get a really wild fourth-hand version, where reporters are told by a former private eye, Richard L. Bast, who allegedly was told by former White House aide Charles Colson that President Nixon felt the CIA was even scheming to "get something" on the White House.

This "Hook the spooks" theorizing may be swallowed whole by some of those Americans who believe that the CIA is a government unto itself, with far-flung agents who murder unfriendly politicians, organize coups, rig foreign elections and topple democratic regimes in favor of dictatorships — all without the President, the secretary of state or other American officials either approving or knowing anything about it.

The CIA has engaged in all the activities mentioned above, but you can wager that the overall CIA actions had the sanction of whomever was President — or of top officials giving approval in the President's behalf.

Looking at all the Watergate evidence, I became convinced months ago that the CIA was more deeply involved than the public or the Congress knew. In my column of May 11, 1973, I told of a conversation in which former CIA director Richard Helms casually mentioned to me that minutes after the burglars were seized inside the Watergate someone at CIA awakened him to tell him of the arrests.

I raised the question of why anyone at CIA would awaken the director in the wee hours just to inform of what at the time seemed to be "a third-rate burglary" — unless the caller knew of potential serious embarrassment to CIA.

As far as I can determine, none of the investigating units has bothered to ask Helms who telephoned him. Or why anyone would feel compelled to awaken the CIA director because of that burglary.

We now know that the men involved in the Watergate and Ellsberg burglaries had previously been involved in numerous CIA ventures. We know that the CIA was still providing disguises and other help to E. Howard Hunt Jr., a leader of the Watergate burglary and accused of being a principal in the Ellsberg break-in. But we have testimony that CIA cooperation was REQUESTED by the White House, and this seems to shoot holes in the theory that the CIA was out to subvert the President and make the White House bend to its will.

Colson has denied telling Bast that President Nixon thought of firing current CIA Director William E. Colby because of the President's suspicion that CIA was up to some dirt in the Watergate and Ellsberg matters.

It wouldn't have made sense anyhow. Helms, not Colby, was CIA boss at the time of, and long after, the Watergate burglary.

During four and a half years in government I got to know Richard Helms pretty well. I found him to be a professional whose integrity I never saw cause to question.

I can conceive of Helms agreeing, under pressure from the White House, to cooperate with Hunt and his crew, or with the White House Plumbers, out of a belief that they really might be uncovering information vital to national security. I can't believe that Helms would knowingly make CIA part of burglaries designed simply to serve the partisan political interest of the party in power.

I find it beyond either acceptance or speculation that Helms would use the CIA, or let it be used, to undermine the President and his White House staff.

Either Colson got suckered by the President, or Bast got suckered by Colson, or the press got taken in by all of them.

There is reason to ask a lot more questions about the CIA's involvement, for it appears that the CIA was used and abused in a shocking way. But there is no evidence of any substance that the whole dirty business was a CIA plot, with Richard Nixon targeted as a major victim.

Personal slants Welcome to your Room 101

By DOUG KNEIBERT

In his novel "1984," George Orwell makes the point that every man has his "Room 101," a specific something that gets to him more than anything else. For Orwell's main character, Winston Smith, it was rats.

I've observed that it's the mental Room 101s that hold the most terrors. Something there is in the human sympathetic nervous system that doesn't like a lot of things. Like fingernails scraping across a blackboard.

I've been giving this some thought lately, and have talked to various people about their own personal hang-ups in this regard. As a result, I have a modest collection to share with you.

As for me, you can scrape your fingernails across a blackboard all day without raising one goosebump; I am of the opinion that the whole blackboard bit has been highly over-rated.

But let me bite into a piece of tinfoil and I go into convulsions. This can be a particular hazard when eating baked potatoes. I have found that the best precaution is to carefully remove the tinfoil and place it beside my plate, and then inspect each bite carefully for glittering objects.

A friend of mine is reduced to jelly at the sound of a knife cutting through a cardboard box. In this category I would also place the paper plate, which can become an instrument of torture when scraped by a wooden fork. Aagghrruh!

The invention of Styrofoam opened up a whole new bag of problems for the neurologically squeamish. The scraping of fingernails across a Styrofoam ice chest can cause violent reactions. Then there is that excruciating squeek that accompanies pressing a water jug into a tight space. And I have known people who required shock therapy to recover from the sight — and sound — of someone biting off a piece of Styrofoam cup.

I ran across an unusual addition to my collection last weekend when I bought my wife an orange popsicle. As she bit into it and struck the wooden stick in the center, I saw her cringe. She said it rated about a 6 on the 10-point Shudder Scale.

I would like to say a belated word about Bruce Bissat, who died three weeks ago when I was on vacation. I didn't learn about his death until I read Jim Perry's eloquent piece on Bissat in the National Observer.

The Democrat-Capital started running Bruce Bissat's column 25 years ago next month. He had signed with Newspaper Enterprise Association the year before. His column had continued in both newspapers ever since.

Bruce Bissat was respected in the trade, especially for his election-year expertise, which was second to none. Although something of a personal eccentric, he was a solid and dependable correspondent of the old school.

Bissat's vacancy will be taken up by Tom Tiede, another familiar NEA byline. His column will appear periodically on the Democrat-Capital's editorial page.

Merry-go-round Nixon aides sought Meany medical data

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Even as President Nixon was courting political support from George Meany, the White House "dirty tricks" crew was conducting a back-door probe to see whether the crusty, then 77-year-old AFL-CIO boss would survive a serious chest hernia.

As part of the snooping, according to "dirty tricks" chief Jack Caulfield, the White House used a management consultant posing as a doctor to try to squeeze medical data out of Meany's personal physician.

Meany's doctor denies he furnished medical information. The consultant agrees, saying he told Caulfield he obtained the information from two labor officials. But Caulfield nevertheless fobbed the "medical" reports off on President Nixon as coming straight from Meany's doctor.

According to Caulfield, the clandestine operation on Meany was ordered by former White House counsel John Dean, probably at the direction of ex-Nixon aides H. R. Haldeman or John Ehrlichman.

In a room locked to the public and the press, Caulfield told the Senate Watergate committee of the Meany caper and previously undisclosed details of his other hidden White House chores.

These, he reluctantly confessed, involved presidential nephew Don Nixon, former Interior Secretary Stewart Udall, the Ford Foundation, the newsmen who revealed the My Lai slaughter, the Nixon campaign's chief of Jewish affairs, "Newsday" and many others.

To carry out his probes, the "dirty tricks" impresario got the willing help of a New York FBI agent; the White House resident Jesuit, Father John McLaughlin, who recently defended the President's foul language; and presidential secretary Rose Mary Woods, to name a few.

The once ruddy Caulfield, who has been weakened by serious abdominal surgery, turned out to be a slippery witness, the classified transcript of his testimony reveals.

"Do you know for a fact that the President was interested in getting some discreet information on the condition of George Meany" in 1971, Caulfield was asked by committee lawyer Terry Lenzner.

"Apparently a memorandum went from Dean to the President," said the ex-New York City detective. "There was intense interest, I do recall, ... on the part of many people at the White House. (Meany) had a (chest) attack ... The thrust of the inquiry was how serious..."

When Lenzner pressed him on how he got his information, Caulfield weaved and dodged.

"I received it from a friend of mine," said the ex-White House official.

"Who was that?" demanded Lenzner.

"Mr. James Juliana," Caulfield finally acknowledged, naming an ex-investigator for the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy, R-Wis., who is now a Washington management consultant.

"Do you know how he got it?" persisted Lenzner.

"I think he got it from a physician friend of his."

"Your memorandum indicates that Dr. Marvin Fuchs, who was George Meany's personal physician, was talked to on a very discreet basis by another physician."

"Yes," said Caulfield.

"Was that Mr. Juliana?"

"Yes," swore Caulfield.

Both Dr. Fuchs and Juliana deny this as a baseless whopper. Juliana told us he was advised the attack was serious by two friends in the labor movement. He gave Caulfield a full report of his talk, he said, adding that the President should visit Meany in the hospital or send flowers. Within a few days, sure enough, not flowers, but cigars reached Meany from the White House.

In another case Caulfield probed the Long Island paper Newsday which was preparing an expose of presidential crony Charles "Bebe" Rebozo.

"The forthcoming Newsday article was a matter of constant conversation around the White House," recalled Caulfield. One day, he said, "I bumped into (Rebozo) in the hall of the White House." Rebozo was "concerned." But Caulfield assured Rebozo he was already on the case.

As Caulfield recounted under oath, he and FBI agent Pat Henry were drinking in New York when Henry said, "there is an article coming out on Mr. Rebozo ... Would

Inflation big item in budget figuring

The nation's mayors, in conference in San Diego, Calif., are crying on one another's shoulders over a crisis that has every city in the country in its grip — inflation.

Sedalia is no exception, the city fathers discovered this week in the course of trying to chop the fiscal '75 budget down to the size of expected revenue.

Departmental requests were running over $3.7 million this year, and other planned expenditures pushed the proposed budget $1.1 million into the red. The meat axes were hauled out, and now a budget of about $3,138,000 looks like a more likely figure.

And all this for a fiscal year in which the city can expect to earn at least $950,000 from its sales tax and receive better than $555,000 in federal revenue sharing funds! (An earlier figure on anticipated revenue sharing funds of $756,000 has since been scaled down.)

The city is beginning to feel the pinch from losing approximately $364,000 in annual tax revenues as a result of the property tax and garbage fee reductions four years ago (a sweetener for the sales tax package), followed by the total elimination of the garbage collection fee last September. Of course, no one back in 1970, or even last September for that matter, anticipated the murderous rate of inflation we have today.

Zooming costs of supplies and materials have affected virtually every city department. Some costs are up as much as 100 per cent over last year, councilmen were told. In addition, the city has considerable capital improvement costs to pay off plus additional personnel expenses.

Many people thought the financial plight of the nation's cities, which we heard so much about a few years back, had ended with the advent of revenue sharing. Now it looks like it's back, with a vengeance.

At the other table West had taken the trouble to listen to the bidding. He was sure that South was counting on five diamond tricks and therefore West led back the eight of spades at trick four. South promptly refused the spade finesse. He thought his contract was safe. Then he came to his hand with the ace of hearts and had to go down two when the diamonds failed to break.

FUNNY BUSINESS

hartbeats equipment loss hits sbr loop

by vaughn hart
sports editor

Increased costs are forcing a lot of businesses to close their doors. That's not really news anymore, since it's nearly an everyday occurrence.

But when non-profit organizations start feeling the pinch from both inflation and lack of co-operation, that's a different story.

"If some things don't change," says Carl Walker, 1905 East Seventh, who is the president of the Sedalia Senior Babe Ruth League, "we may not continue the program next year."

Walker, who said the majority of the league's board of directors feel the same way, was pointing not only at inflation, but also at the loss of equipment the organization has experienced in recent years.

"I doubt if we have 10 full uniforms left from the 42 new ones we purchased last year," Walker stated, noting the large number of suits that were missing.

"When we put them (players) on the field, people like to see them in full uniforms, not what we have now," the SBR head continued.

Right now many of the players in the league have only part of their respective team uniforms. At best, the overall appearance of the league could probably be best described as "hodgepodge."

Some have full uniforms, but many have only parts of uniforms.

The main cause of the lack of adequate uniforms, according to Walker, stems "from players not turning in their equipment after a season has ended."

Walker said the league spent around $1,200 last year to outfit two complete teams with uniforms.

"At $25.20 a crack, we obviously can't afford to keep on doing that every year," he said.

But the loss of equipment is only part of the problem. The other is increasing costs — of everything.

"We operate on a budget of roughly $1,200 each year. We were able to purchase the uniforms last year from money we had left over from tournaments we had held here," Walker said.

Walker added that the league spends $60 per week for umpires, that bats had increased from $4.60 in 1973 to $5.75 this year, and that a dozen baseballs cost $30.10.

"I realize that this isn't a big operation, but it does cost money," he continued.

Walker, as well as the board he said, agrees that the league can operate on its small budget — if it can get some co-operation from the players and parents of players.

"Sure, we know each year that we've got to replace some uniforms because of wear, but the number we are looking at right now is ridiculous. I know there are uniforms out from last year that haven't been turned in. If we could come up with an accurate accounting of our equipment, we would be able to find out just what we need," Walker feels.

What all this boils down to is this. Is it worth running an operation that can support itself, but won't, simply because of lack of co-operation?

Walker truthfully thinks not.

"I'm pretty sure I or anyone of the board members could go drum up some extra money somewhere. But I think it looks bad on our part when players in the league don't even respect their sponsors enough to give them the consideration of turning in their equipment when they're done with it," Walker says emphatically.

"There are a lot of ways we could make some extra money on our own, but it looks senseless to me for us to make it, use it to buy new equipment and then have it #*%$!@ because the players won't return the equipment," he said.

"All we're asking is for players who have uniforms and not turned them in from last year or previous seasons to do so, so we can find out where we stand," Walker concluded.

NFLPA asks rookies for support on strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association is asking all rookies to support a strike threatened for Monday by staying away from training camps that open next week.

The players union and the NFL Management Council, bargaining agent for owners of the 26 teams, are deadlocked on 63 contract demands made by the players. Despite the aid of federal mediators, talks broke off Wednesday.

In a letter to all rookies Thursday, Players Association President Bill Curry of the Houston Oilers asked their support in "our efforts for your own benefits, protections and freedom."

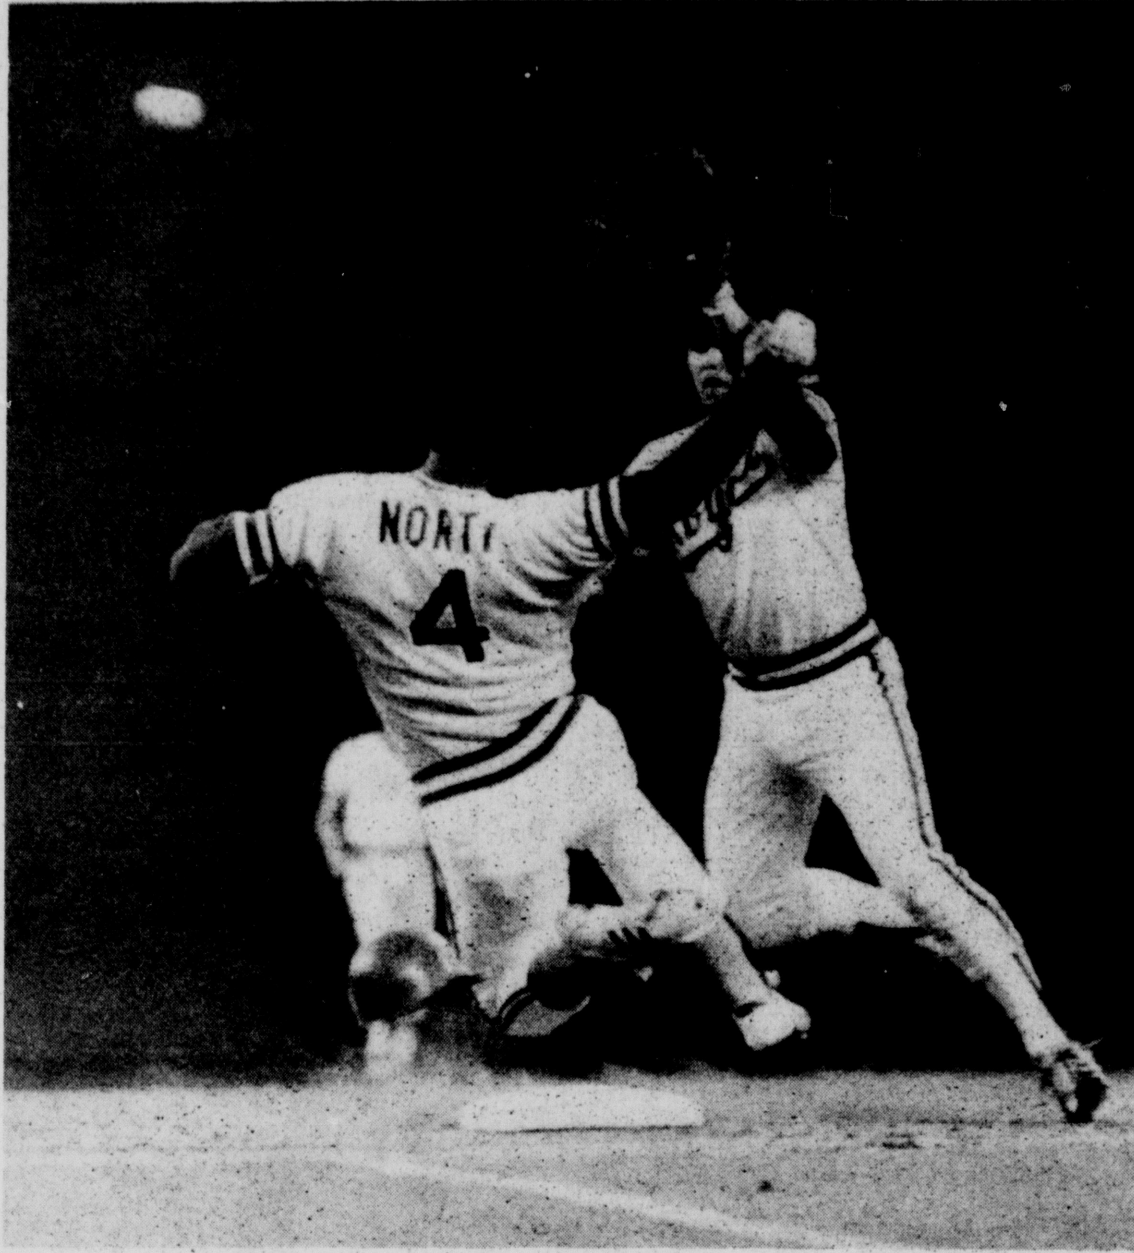

The owners have planned to use rookies and free agents in exhibition and regular-season games if the veterans strike.

Oakland's Bill North (4) starts his slide into second base as Kansas City shortstop Fred Patek waits for the throw from catcher Fran Healy in the

St. Louis scores early

Cards nail sixth win in last eight outings

NEW YORK (AP) — Shea Stadium seems to have run out of miracles for the New York Mets.

"Maybe it's the good home cookin', I dunno," Manager Yogi Berra muttered Thursday night after a 6-1 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals dropped the defending National League champions home record to a sour 11-21 and kept them mired in the East Division cellar.

"Is there a home court advantage?" wondered starter and loser Ray Sadecki, who was knocked out in the second inning. "It's supposed to be an asset playing well on the road," he added, noting that the Mets were coming off three straight triumphs in Chicago and a 5-2 road trip.

"This is a strange place to play anyway," said St. Louis catcher Ted Simmons, who drove in two runs with a single and double and caught Lynn McGlothen's four-hitter that made him the National League's first 11-game winner.

"It gets pretty loud out there, especially on Saturdays and Sundays with two million people screaming their brains out and one of those big jets flying over your head every 10 seconds. Where else can you play baseball like that?"

Lou Brock and Joe Torre also have some thoughts on the subject.

"As long as I've been with this club it's had a tendency to rise to the occasion," said Brock. "When we're in a dead town we seem to play dead baseball."

Torre's theory is that Busch Stadium in St. Louis "is a better pitcher's park than Shea. It's tough to hit a home run there. I haven't heard a pitcher complain about our park yet."

"But the story isn't the Mets at this point; it's our ballclub. This is the best club I've been with in my 14 years in the big leagues. We have depth we've never had before. How many clubs could lose a Reggie Smith for two weeks and move into first place?"

The Cardinals' victory was their sixth in eight games and put them one-half game and seven percentage points ahead of runner-up Philadelphia in the NL East.

Torre laced a single and two doubles and also drove in a pair of runs as the Cards jumped to a 6-0 lead after two innings.

CFL owners, players agree

OTTAWA (AP) — Canadian Football League veterans were to be back with their clubs today after an early morning settlement of their long-festering contract dispute with league owners.

Agreement came at the end of a day-long series of meetings, proposals and counter-proposals Thursday. The sessions started about 1 p.m. and ended about 2:30 a.m. today.

Details of the agreement were not available immediately, but it is believed to be centered on a three-year term despite early opposition of the players.

Pattin tough in relief

Royals come back to trip Oakland, 5-4

KANSAS CITY (AP) — You can bet on it . . . Marty Pattin will throw a lot of fast balls in the future.

A home run that lost a ball game in Detroit June 15 awakened Pattin to the fact he had for years ignored what he regards as "my best pitch—the fast ball" all too often.

Pattin, armed with fast balls galore, made his first appearance since the Detroit slider disaster Thursday night and hurled the Kansas City Royals to a 5-4 victory over the Oakland A's in a brilliant 6 2-3 inning relief stint.

Pattin gave up only three hits, one run, walked none and struck out two.

"I threw five sliders in a row to Rodriguez (Aurelio) in relief in Detroit, and he hit one of them for a home run that lost the game," Pattin explained. "I realized right then that my fast ball is my best pitch and I haven't been using it enough over the years."

"I decided right then also that I wasn't going to be beaten on my second and third best pitch. I used the fast ball an awful lot tonight, and I won. I'll keep right on using it more and more."

The Royals were trailing 3-0 when Pattin, 2-3, relieved Lindy McDaniel with one out in the third inning. Kansas City exploded for all five of its runs against Kent Holtzman, 8-9, in the fourth, the first eight batters reaching base.

Cookie Rojas started the outburst with a single, Amos Otis doubled, and Hal McRae ripped a two-run triple. Fran Healy walked and Al Cowens singled, scoring McRae.

Healy stole third, and Tony Solaita slashed a grounder to Pat Bourque, who bobbed the ball for an error, allowing Healy to score. After John "Blue Moon" Odom relieved Holtzman, Fred Patek reached first on a fielder's choice and Cowens was safe at third when third baseman Sal Bando missed the bag for an error and then scored on George Brett's single.

Gene Tenace and Joe Rudi singled for Oakland in the second before McDaniel walked Bourque and Dick Green, forcing in one run. A single by Bert Campaneris, a double by Bando and Rudi's single produced two Oakland runs in the third.

Tenace led off the sixth with a triple and went home on activated

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Royals have reactivated pitcher Nelson Briles and sent infielder Bobby Floyd to their Omaha farm club in the American Association.

Briles will be making his first appearance tonight against the Oakland A's since he underwent knee surgery more than two months ago. He will be opposed by the A's Glenn Abbott.

Floyd had played in only 10 games and was batting .111.

Bourque's sacrifice fly for the only run off Pattin.

Green singled with one out for the A's in the ninth, and Bill North forced pinch runner Herb Washington and reached second when Royals shortstop Fred Patek overthrew first.

"It entered my mind that 'here they come again,'" Pattin said, reflecting on the A's stirring comebacks in other games against the Royals this year, "but I put that out of my mind and challenged them."

Only 3 break par

Scores soar at Western

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — The distinct possibility of a third consecutive week with an over-par winner has arisen from the first round of the $200,000 Western Open Golf Tournament.

Only Bob Goalby, Frank Beard and obscure rookie Gary McCord—all with 70s—could break par-71 Thursday on the 7,002-yard Butler National Golf Club course, a new layout the touring pros are playing for the first time.

And Goalby, 43, a former Masters champion, predicted the eventual winner will be in plus-par figures.

"I don't think anyone can shoot four good rounds here," he said. "There is too much water, too many problems, too many chances to make a mistake."

"I don't think there is any question that a score over par will win it."

Accepting entries for golf tourney

CARROLLTON — Entries for the annual Carrollton County Country Club's Invitational Tournament are being accepted for the 18-hole event July 14.

Plans call for eight flights, including 32 in the championship division. More than $1,000 in prizes is being offered.

Area golfers interested in entering the event may contact tournament director Lloyd Swift, Box 255, Carrollton, Mo.

Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino, each with an opening 74, agreed.

"I'm not far out of it," Trevino said. "I think the winner is going to have at least one round where he's three or four over par."

"Anything from 286 (two over par) to 290 could win," Palmer said. "It's just like the Open. I'm three over par and not out of it."

Hale Irwin won the U.S. Open two weeks ago with a seven-over-par, highest in more than a decade. Last week Jim Colbert scored a playoff victory in the American Golf Classic after tying for the top spot with a one-over-par score.

It's the first time in recent history that consecutive tournaments had been won in plus-par figures.

The first-round scores were the highest of any on the tour this year except in the American National Championship.

Lanny Wadkins was one stroke off the pace at 71, tied with Irwin, Tom Weiskopf, Al Geiberger, Eddie Pearce, Rik Massengale, Gary Sanders and Gary Groh.

California Angels hire Dick Williams

ANAHEIM (AP) — Dick Williams, who led the Oakland A's to victory in the past two World Series, is leaving his exile from baseball next Monday to manage the California Angels because the offer was "so tremendous I couldn't turn it down."

Williams, 45, agreed to serve with the Angels through the 1977 American League season for what is believed to be at least $100,000 a year. He succeeds Bobby Winkles, fired earlier Thursday as the Angels, 30-44, languished in last place in the Western Division.

"I'm quite happy they called me and I'm quite happy to be returning to baseball," Williams said from his Riviera Beach, Fla., home. He has been in private business since A's owner Charles O. Finley blocked his being hired as manager of the New York Yankees.

Williams quit the A's after the 1973 World Series and Finley, after allowing the Angels to approach Williams, requested the lifting of a court injunction in San Francisco that prevented Williams from managing any team except Oakland through 1975.

The fiery field leader said he missed baseball, but when asked if he would have taken any offer, he said, "No sir! Definitely not."

Coach Whitey Herzog will direct the Angels until Williams arrives late Sunday or early Monday because of East Coast commitments that include a charity game in Hartford, Conn.

Angel General Manager Harry Dalton reached agreement with Williams about 12 hours and "six or seven" phone calls after he first reached Williams and learned he was interested.

The A's will be in town to open a series, and Williams said, "That's just a coincidence. But managing against my old team will be exciting, to say the least."

"Williams, the only man to manage more than two seasons for Finley, had said he wanted to leave Oakland so that he could be closer to his family on the East Coast.

"The salary, the (contract) longevity and the locality," said Williams, persuaded him to come to the Angels. "I was raised in Southern California, in Pasadena, and I still have family, my parents, out there," he said.

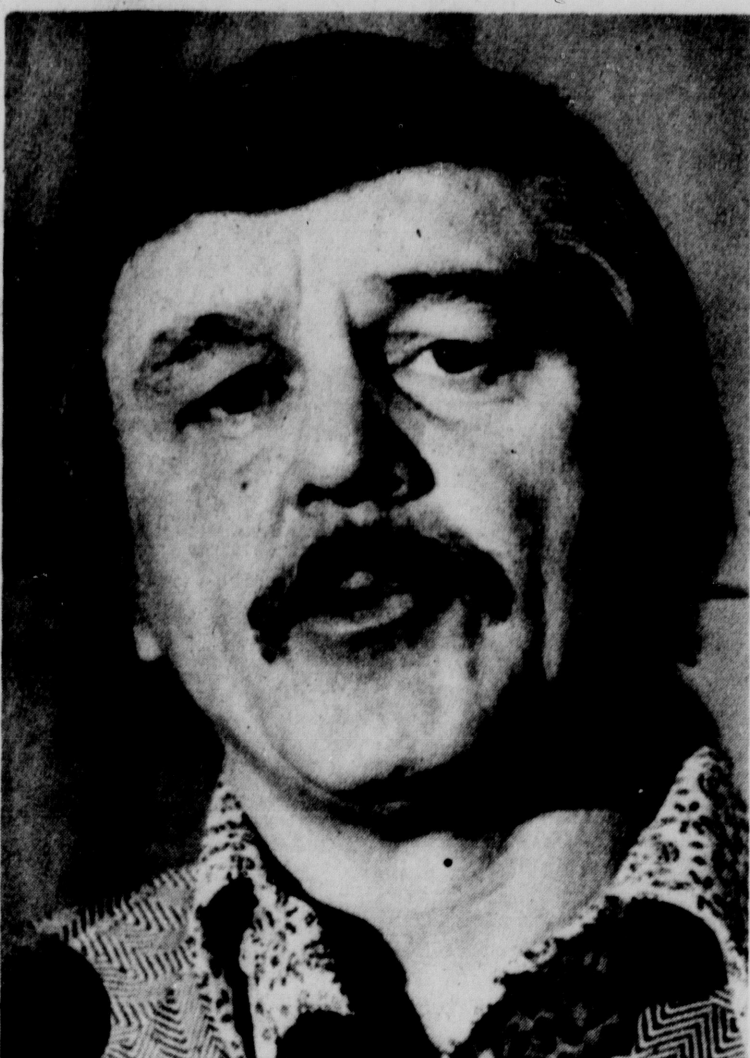

He indicated he will retain the Angels' coaching staff.

"I will spend time between now and Monday studying my charts on the Angels from the past three years," he said.

"It will take me a few days to gather my thoughts and then I'll present them to Harry Dalton and the coaches."

Dalton said Winkles was fired because the team was going badly.

Gene Autry, Angels board chairman, said Finley "didn't ask for compensation. We did this on a friendship basis."

Thursday's play halted by rain at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Ilie Nastase had the contented smile of Lewis Carroll's Cheshire cat as it rained and rained ... and rained some more at the Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

Thursday's rain was good news for Nastase, No. 2 seed from Romania, and other European clay court players. As Wimbledon's famed lush lawns sweated beneath covers, they presented a grim view for the grass court whiz kids of the United States and Australia.

"I feel good," said Nastase, at his best on Europe's slow clay courts.

"I've never known Wimbledon to play so slow," he said. "I think I might go a long way this year."

Nearly two days have been lost in the 87th championships to rain.

The program should have reached the last 32 in both the men's and women's singles by today. But only a handful of players have completed second-round matches.

Safely through to the men's third round were top-seeded John Newcombe and fellow Australian Ken Rosewall. Stan Smith and Tom Gorman of the United States, defending champion Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia, fifth-seeded Swede Bjorn Borg and Nastase.

In the women's singles, the top two seeds, Billie Jean King and Chris Evert of the United States, as well as British veteran Christine Janes, were the only players through to the round of 32.

Nastase wasn't the only player who could see the change in Wimbledon's usually fizzing surface.

Manuel Orantes of Spain, seeded only 12th but considered among the finest slow clay courts players in the world, could have a good chance of a big breakthrough here unless the grass dries fast.

Other Europeans who might enjoy the changed conditions include Alex Metreveli, the Soviet Union's best player ever, and Borg, who already has won the Italian and French titles this year—on clay.

The hopes of Newcombe, Smith and third-seeded Jim Connors of Belleville, Ill., could be buried in the slow courts.

Because of the rain, only two matches were completed Thursday, and both had been halted by rain and darkness Wednesday. Miss Evert outlasted Lesley Hunt of Australia 8-6, 5-7, 11-9, and Borg beat Ross Case of Australia 3-6, 6-1, 8-6, 7-5.

Marshall Ban Johnson club moves into second

A 13-strikeout pitching performance by Scott Harvey of Marshall has moved Marshall one-half game ahead of Sedalia and into second place in the Western Division of the Central Missouri Ban Johnson League.

Harvey's effort helped Marshall to an 8-1 victory over New Franklin. It was the eighth victory of the season for Marshall, which trails Boonville by one and one-half games.

Sedalia, which has a 6-2 record, was idle Thursday night.

Boonville's Denny Sercu, who will be out of action for the next two weeks due to National Guard summer camp, picked up his sixth win against no defeats this season in another Thursday game, hurling Boonville to a 9-2 decision over Huntsville. The victory was Sercu's 33rd of his three-year Ban Johnson career.

Rex Scott homered and Dan Bestgen pitched a seven-hitter for Tipton, however, Tipton couldn't pull out a victory in their game with Columbia. Columbia slipped into the victory column with their sixth win of the season, 6-5.

In the night's only other scheduled activity, California was forced to forfeit to Centralia, when they couldn't field enough players.

Jackson pads lead in A.L. balloting

NEW YORK (AP) — Reggie Jackson of the World Champion Oakland A's is proving to be the overwhelming favorite among fans for the American League All-Star team, already polling more than a million votes.

Jackson, the AL's Most Valuable Player last year, had 1,115,008 votes, according to figures released today by the commissioner's office. Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins was second in the voting with 875,407 votes for the second base position.

Al Kaline, now being used as a designated hitter by Detroit, was second to Jackson for the outfield positions with 441,229, followed by outfielder Bobby Murcer of the New York Yankees with 433,061.

After Carew in balloting for second was Cookie Rojas of Kansas City with 338,733.

Leading the catchers was Boston's Carlton Fisk with 547,627 ballots, followed by Bill Freehan of the Detroit Tigers with 363,561. Dick Allen of Chicago's White Sox led first basemen with 506,116, comfortably ahead of Boston's Carl Yastrzemski with 358,014.

Third base was locked up by Baltimore's Brooks Robinson, 508,584, followed by the A's Sal Bando, 321,205. Another Athletic, Bert Campaneris, led shortstop balloting with 706,471 votes, far ahead of the Tiger's Ed Brinkman with 314,654.

A total of 2,326,794 ballots were cast in the first three weeks of All-Star balloting. Voting ends Sunday, July 7.

Sedalia had 345½ points in Thursday's last round, while Columbia tallied 336½ points.

Humphrey denies illegality in funding campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, stung by a Senate Watergate Committee staff report on his 1972 presidential campaign finances, says he did nothing illegal in using more than $100,000 of his own money in his campaign and concealing that fact from the public.

"With the Lord Jesus Christ as my guy, that was as honest a deal as kissing your mother," the Minnesota Democrat said.

Humphrey, in a sometimes emotional, late-night telephone call to an Associated Press reporter Thursday, said the money represented "a lifetime of investment" by himself and his wife Muriel.

Humphrey said he omitted any mention of the use of personal funds when he voluntarily disclosed his finances during Democratic presidential primaries because at that time the law didn't require full disclosure and because he wanted to conceal the matter from his family.

"I didn't like to have to contribute that money, but we had to do it if we were going to campaign," Humphrey said.

Humphrey said the Watergate staff report was written by a Republican staff member, Donald Sanders, and he said he resented the tone and implications of the report. "It just ends up that you look like a burglar," he said.

Meanwhile, the committee staff on Thursday circulated a new report dealing with presidential campaign finances of Democrats George McGovern and John V. Lindsay.

It said McGovern is campaigning for Senate re-election this year with the aid of $340,417 in left-over 1972 presidential funds. It said he shifted these funds out of presidential campaign committees while these committees were forcing creditors to write off $35,322 as bad debts. Such transfer of funds has been used by other candidates and the report did not challenge its legality.

But it said the maneuver raises a question of whether McGovern violated at least the spirit of the federal law banning corporate gifts to federal candidates.

A McGovern spokesman, John Holm, said the left-over presidential money was shifted to the Senate race on the orders of several state and local presidential finance chairmen who controlled the money. Holm said McGovern would try to keep the senators on the Watergate committee from adopting the staff's findings.

The report said $10,000 in cash was raised for former New York Mayor Lindsay's presidential campaign by a city Highway Department official who solicited the money from two contractors who later got a $1.7-million job to supply the city with asphalt.

It said the money, in $20 bills stuffed into an envelope, passed through the hands of Lindsay's top campaign aide, Richard Aurelio, and cannot be accounted for.

Aurelio responded by calling the report an example of "sloppy reporting by the committee staff" and said all the cash had been properly recorded and reported publicly. The committee staff's said review of Lindsay finance records "fails to reveal any recording of the cash contributions."

Although the report was edited by Democratic staff members before being circulated to the committee, a Humphrey aide said he believes the senators on the Watergate committee will reject many of the findings.

"Most of that stuff is going to be totally eliminated," the aide said. "We're just being used to balance off all this Nixon-Rebozo stuff."

The staff report said Humphrey ordered transfer of $89,000 in stock and $23,000 in cash from a blind trust into the presidential campaign during January and February of 1972, two months before a new federal law made it illegal for a presidential candidate to use more than $50,000 of his own funds in a campaign.

Humphrey said the stock actually was worth somewhat less, $86,000, putting the total amount of personal funds used at $109,000.

The report said the committee staff was unable to get answers about how and when the blind trust was set up or how and when Humphrey came to own the stock.

Humphrey said the trust was established in 1965 when he was vice president and that this was reported in the New York Times. Such trusts are used by some federal officials to avoid the appearance of conflicts of interest. Their owners are supposed to be kept ignorant of where the money is invested.

The report said Humphrey turned down a committee request to be interviewed and had failed to produce all the documents investigators sought.

Humphrey gave The AP copies of two letters from committee Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., and pointed out that neither of them asked that he be interviewed about the trust or his personal funds, but only about an allegedly illegal donation to his campaign by a large dairy cooperative.

Humphrey said he gave committee investigators more than 200 documents from his files and balked at supplying further documents because he was asked to give up all his correspondence for a year.

The staff report disclosed that all records of Humphrey's early campaign finances were destroyed in the summer of 1972 by his campaign manager, Jack Chestnut, whom the report said apparently instigated an illegal corporate payment scheme and who invoked the Fifth Amendment and refused to testify about it.

"I didn't know that Jack Chestnut had done away with the records," Humphrey said. "I don't think that I should be made to look like a burglar, because I didn't violate the law."

Chrysler raising prices again

DETROIT (AP) — In a move that could kick off a fourth round of auto price hikes during the 1974 model year, Chrysler Corp. says it is passing on major price boosts by the steel industry. The average Chrysler rise will be about $60 a vehicle, or 1.4 per cent.

Chrysler said Thursday it is raising prices on cars and trucks because of the higher steel costs. The average $60 increase covers base price and options and will be effective next Monday.

The announcement came little more than a month after U.S. auto makers said they anticipated no further price increases until 1975 models are introduced in September.

A General Motors spokesman declined on Thursday to rule out a new GM price hike.

"Obviously this additional steel cost increase will have to be considered in our continuing view of prices," he said.

Ford had no comment. American Motors said it had no plans for an immediate increase.

The industry completed its third price action early in May, with increases ranging from an average of $67 at AMC to $163 at Ford.

Earlier this week, the nation's two largest steel producers, Bethlehem and U.S. Steel, announced price boosts for a wide range of products.

Bethlehem's increase included a 15 per cent boost on rolled steel, used in the manufacture of automobiles and appliances. U.S. Steel did not specify its price increase for rolled steel, but it was thought to be similar to Bethlehem's.

Chrysler said its steel costs have gone up an average $102 a car since April 30, forcing it to reconsider an announced decision to hold the line until the new models are unveiled in September.

"We figured the next steel increase would come in August and be reflected in 1975-car prices," a Chrysler spokesman said. "But because of U.S. Steel and Bethlehem announcing immediate increases, we had to go ahead with what we did."

Chrysler has raised retail prices an average of $534 since the end of the 1973 model year.

Under the latest increase, the base price on a four-door compact Dodge Dart with an eight-cylinder engine goes up $36 to $3,112. The intermediate two-door Plymouth Satellite jumps $51 to $3,271. A full-size four-door Chrysler New Yorker is up $80 to $5,686.

Since the end of the 1973 model year, GM has raised prices an average of $536, including $142 in options made standard.

Ford has raised its prices an average of $464 since September.

AMC has raised prices an average of $316 since September.

All the companies have said 1975 model prices will go up substantially, primarily because of new federally mandated emissions control equipment.

Pettis County Post No. 16, The American Legion, will hold a special B.B.Q. and open house of new recreation equipment for members and guests only on Monday, July 1st, at 6:30 p.m. at the post hall. This will take the place of the regular business meeting this week. Post members must pay $2.00 in advance to cover steak costs for themselves and each guest. Bring your own baked potato, ready for the grill. Hamburger on hand for the kids. If you wish, also bring a covered dish.

Farm roundup

Butz says Nixon also against government grain stockpiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz says he has the support of President Nixon in opposing any move to have the government get back into the business of owning huge stockpiles of surplus grain.

Butz, who has been vocal in criticizing proposals in Congress for government-owned food reserves, said further Thursday that a "positive factor" in Nixon's recent visit to the Middle East and also on his current trip to Moscow.

It may be possible, Butz said, to "buy peace" with food by making U.S. production available to the world through exports. But, he said, the government should stay out of the farm business and avoid rebuilding crop surpluses at taxpayer expense.

"The man who occupies the Oval Office over here agrees with me," Butz told a meeting of a national grains advisory committee. "But he's been known to change his mind, too, under pressure from Congress."

Butz said there has been what he characterized as "loose talk" about starvation around the world and how it should be met. A great debate is shaping up on what role the United States should play.

David L. Hume, administrator of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, told the meeting a world food conference scheduled for next fall so far appears to be designed on a thesis that production must be stepped up to meet human needs.

But world leaders also should be looking at the marketing of grain and other foodstuffs in the world arena to see how more effectively commodities can be channeled where the greatest needs appear, Hume said.

Although Hume did not mention it, his comments followed a report last week from Rome by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations which showed food relief to stricken areas of Africa have run into troublesome bottlenecks.

The FAO report said that in April and May a total of 90,000 metric tons of food grains had arrived in the port of Dakar to help the drought-stricken people of the Sahelian Zone countries.

Presenting the 84 mpg Volkswagen.

Since all the car manufacturers are conducting their own mileage tests these days, we at Volkswagen thought we'd conduct one too.
So we modified our body—and our engine. And, of course, we got someone who didn't weigh much to drive.
Lo and behold, we got 84 miles per gallon! Ridiculous? Nobody normally drives like this? Of course. That's precisely our point.
Nobody normally drives like most of those tests you're seeing.
Volkswagen: An honest 25* miles per gallon.

Foot trouble can spread to the body

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Do you have occasional headache, backache, leg pain or a general bad feeling all over?

Columbia podiatrists and orthopedic surgeons say these problems may stem from the same source—foot trouble.

"So many people abuse their feet wearing improperly fitting shoes. They bring the pain on themselves and they certainly feel bad all over," said Dr. Dean Jarvis, a Columbia podiatrist. "What other part of the body carries the pressure of the body's weight all day?"

Dr. Garth Russell, an orthopedic surgeon, says foot problems begin to crop up in the late teens, but many people have little difficulty until their late 30s or 40s.

"We see 10 women with foot problems for every man," said Russell. "Men's footwear has standardized over the years. They have lower heels and are better built. They don't aggravate existing abnormalities. On the other hand, we see women with constantly changing styles." Russell said constant changes of shoe styles and shapes also contribute to foot problems. "The foot ligaments should be allowed to stretch to fit one type or shape of shoe," he said.

Jarvis said platform shoes are awkward and hamper walking, give unnatural arch support and don't balance the foot properly. "I've treated several injuries, including ankle and knee injury and back pain. Platform shoes tend to pitch the body forward, and this causes the back to sway."

Another new shoe style, the "earth shoe," also caused some skepticism among the foot experts. The shoe features a toe higher than the heel.

Other than improper shoes, the doctors mentioned several causes of foot problems.

"We aren't walking as much as we used to," Russell said. "The muscles, bones and ligaments of the foot are not as strong as they should be."

Jarvis pointed to stretch socks, advertised to fit all sizes, as another problem. He said that the socks are often too tight and don't stretch adequately.

Nixon, Brezhnev open summit talks

MOSCOW (AP) — President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev launched their third annual summit Thursday with 70 minutes of private talks, a Kremlin banquet and new pledges to strengthen detente.

Brezhnev also took a direct crack at Nixon's home front critics of Soviet-American negotiations.

After their opening talks — held alone except for an interpreter — Nixon and Brezhnev used their dinner toasts to applaud the fruits of two years of bargaining.

Nixon clearly forecast a visit by Brezhnev to the United States next year, telling the Communist party general secretary: "I trust that on your next visit to the United States next year you will be able to see more of our country..."

Nixon said much more negotiating remains ahead for the United States and the Soviet Union. He credited the agreements reached so far to "a personal relationship that was established between the general secretary and the President of the United States" and to relationships between other Soviet and American officials. 34

Earlier, thousands of Russians silently waving Soviet and American flags gave Nixon the warmest welcome he has ever gotten in the Soviet capital.

Brezhnev met Nixon with smiles and a handshake at Vnukovo airport in a scene much more cordial than Nixon's first visit as President in 1972. On that visit, the party leader didn't even show up for the welcoming ceremony.

In his toast, Nixon said that in his meetings with Brezhnev he will strive to reach agreements that will give "every individual in each of our countries a positive stake in peace, because it is in this way that two peoples with different systems of government can establish relationships that will not be broken in the future."

Brezhnev spoke of "a cardinal turn" in relations between the two countries at the first summit in 1972, and expressed confidence "that the peoples will support those who seek to assure their peaceful future and a tranquil life for millions of people, not those who sow enmity and distrust."

Acknowledging that progress toward strengthened detente requires effort and "comes up against rather active resistance," Brezhnev hit directly at those who question Nixon's approach to summitry.

"There is no need for me to dwell on this subject since our American guests know better and in more detail than we about those who oppose international detente, who favor whipping up the arms race and returning to the methods and mores of the cold war."

In his toast, Nixon apparently forecast yet another Nixon-Brezhnev meeting to take place in the United States, saying he hoped the Soviet leader would have a greater opportunity to tour America on his next visit.

Brezhnev met Nixon at outlying Vnukovo Airport. As leader of the Communist party, Brezhnev normally is not on hand to greet visiting chiefs of state but the Nixon-Brezhnev relationship is unique, spanning three summits in as many years, and the only two trips to Moscow by any American president.

Nixon and Brezhnev were scheduled to open formal conversations at 5 p.m., but the talks began 90 minutes later. There was no official explanation for the delay but Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren suggested the two leaders might have felt a quick start was unnecessary because Brezhnev's departure from protocol permitted them to talk privately during the 18-mile drive from the airport to the Kremlin.

Along the motorcade route, organized crowds were somewhat larger than for Nixon's 1972 visit in the opinion of newsmen who had seen both. They estimated some 10,000 people were gathered, most of them in groups seemingly spaced at random.

Fair train fenced in Workmen from a Sedalia fence company put a five-foot metal fence around the old Frisco locomotive and caboose on the State Fairgrounds Thursday. The purpose of the new fence is to protect the train from vandalism and to avoid possible injury to children. The exhibit will be open during the Fair and any special events on the grounds. Crowley Fence Co. has a contract for $7,366 with the state to fence the train, some stables, and repair the fence along the south end of the Fairgrounds. A "walking gate" between the camping area and the grounds will also be built to keep pedestrians from having to use the car entrances. Here, Melvin Cramer, right, Houstonia, and Ronnie Clark, Sedalia, work on the fence near where a gate will be put.

Blue law petitions may prompt ballot

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A major step in the latest move to repeal the ban on Sunday sales in Missouri was taken Thursday as petitions carrying more than 100,000 signatures of those favoring placing the question before the voters were delivered to the secretary of state.

Rep. Phillip Scaglia, D-Kansas City, spearheaded the eight-month petition drive, bolstered by support from merchants in St. Louis and Kansas City.

Petitions to place a Socialist Workers party candidate on the ballot in Missouri for the first time were also submitted to Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick. A spokesman for Kirkpatrick said it will take about three weeks to certify the names on the petitions.

Scaglia, who has failed in the past two sessions of the legislature to have the so-called "Sunday Blue Law" repealed, contended the law is vague, has too many loopholes and is not uniformly enforced. Although upheld as constitutional by the Missouri Supreme Court in 1964, the law, which prohibits sale of most retail items on Sunday, does permit the sale of some of those items in resort areas.

Proponents of the repeal move claim Missouri is losing millions of tax dollars because persons are going to bordering states to make retail purchases on Sunday.

But opponents, including the Missouri Retailers Association and the Missouri Automobile Dealers Association, insist that repeal of the law will force stores to be open on Sunday simply because their competition remains open, thereby increasing operating costs. Opposition has also been voiced by various religious organizations.

Scaglia's group, which only needed 61,000 certified signatures to place the issue on the November ballot, made no distinction between registered and nonregistered voters, and Kirkpatrick said he will not count signatures of unregistered voters until a decision on that issue is made by the Missouri Supreme Court.

A suit challenging the legality of a provision in the 1973 voter registration law that all petition signers must be registered voters is pending before the high court.

Officials of the Socialist Workers Party said they were confident Kirkpatrick would certify their petitions, which carried more than 11,000 more signatures than the required 18,000. Nearly all those signed during the 3½-week drive are registered voters, party spokesmen said.

Barbara Mutnick, the party's candidate for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Democrat Thomas Eagleton, told newsmen she would have an opportunity for victory in the fall if the Socialist Workers party is given a fair hearing around the state, but indicated that probably would not occur.

Mrs. Mutnick said her campaign is being financed through small donations from individuals with about $3,000 collected since she announced her candidacy in March.

First aid training

Lenora Payne, 1200 State Fair Blvd., left, gave nine members of the Sedalia police and fire departments a refresher course in Red Cross first aid Thursday morning. Mrs. Payne is a dispatcher with the police department and a certified instructor in first aid. Police Chief William Miller said that most of the policemen have had the training, but this course will bring them up to date in first aid. The entire course takes eight hours and Chief Miller said that he expects everyone in the department to take it. (Democrat-Capitol Photo)

Kitchen carpet still cloaked in mystery

The great carpet mystery remains unsolved, and it probably will remain that way.

The mystery began when Mr. and Mrs. James Melchert, 1721 South Ingram, discovered June 6 that a person or persons unknown had laid 192 square feet of kitchen carpeting in their home while they were away that morning.

"We haven't heard a thing," said Melchert. "Whoever did it obviously wants to remain anonymous."

Melchert said he heard "through the grapevine" that a local carpet company mistakenly installed the carpeting and later decided not to admit the error.

But who did it? "I really don't know," Melchert said. "All I know is that whoever it was wants to remain anonymous."

Spokesman at local carpet stores told The Democrat-Capitol that, based on the description of the pickup truck that was seen at the Melchert's residence on June 6, either of two local stores could have been involved. But spokesman at both of the stores denied this.

Melchert said that somewhere in Sedalia is another house with identical carpeting. These are the persons who should have received the carpeting in the first place. Melchert said if these persons notify him, then the mystery can be cleared up.

One local carpet store spokesman said that the persons who made the mistake may wish to remain anonymous to not only avoid embarrassment, but also to avoid a possible law suit.

Melchert said he has gotten used to the carpeting now and likes it. But he still can't get over what happened:

"The more I think about it, the stupider it is."

Nixon's defense begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's lawyer opened his formal impeachment defense Thursday and drew a guarded reaction from Republicans on the House Judiciary Committee.

James D. St. Clair, Nixon's chief Watergate lawyer, completed his presentation of evidence on the Watergate breakin and cover-up and on the administration's handling of the ITT antitrust case.

Asked if St. Clair presented anything to contradict the material presented during the past seven weeks by the committee's impeachment staff, Rep. Charles E. Wiggins, R-Calif., said, "I think not. He gave a different emphasis."

"It tends to fill in the gaps," said Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., of the evidence presented during the day-long closed session.

Committee rules limit St. Clair, at this stage, from going beyond a strictly factual presentation of evidence. He will later question witnesses and argue his case.

Wiggins said that in dealing with allegations that Nixon made hush money payments to Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr., St. Clair concentrated on all conversations and testimony that tended to show the President did not authorize any payment.

Asked if the presentation convinced him, Wiggins, one of Nixon's strongest supporters on the committee, said, "That's one of the ultimate questions. I'm reserving judgment on that."

Both Wiggins and Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, said they were disturbed by the failure of the committee staff to include in its presentation testimony before the Senate Watergate committee that indicated the matter of hush money payments was left hanging after a discussion in Nixon's office on March 21, 1973.

St. Clair said he presented material to rebut allegations that Nixon was aware that former Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst had failed to tell the truth about the ITT case when he testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee on his nomination to be attorney general.

But St. Clair refused to describe the evidence he presented. The White House lawyer said he expected to complete his presentation Friday.

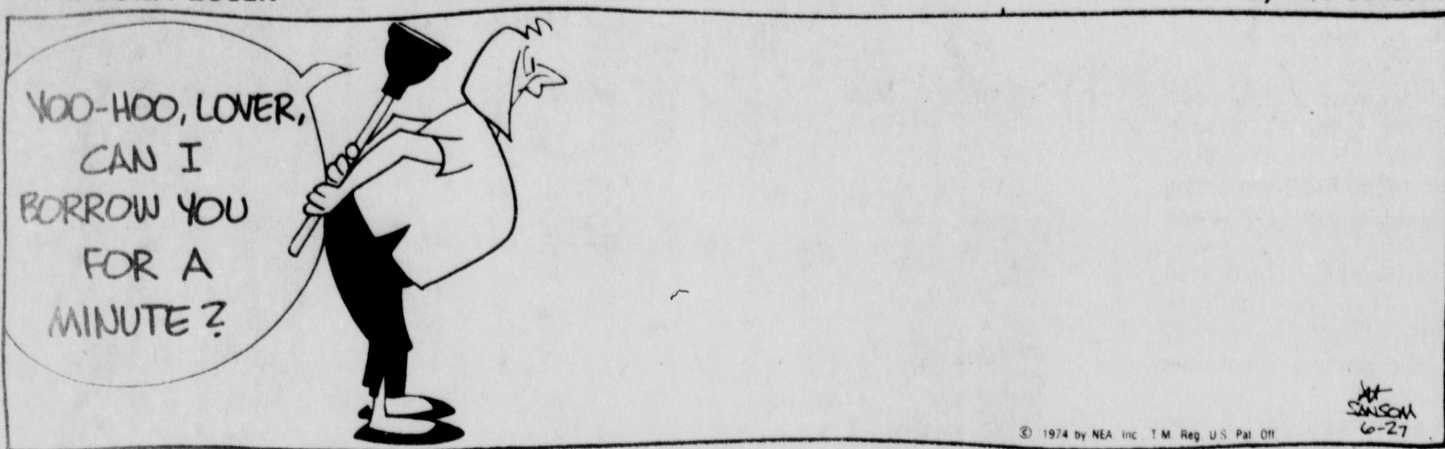

St. Clair gave each member four books of evidence, each about the size of a big-city telephone directory. The largest dealt with the Watergate cover-up.

The books covered all the allegations heard by the committee while receiving evidence for seven weeks from its impeachment staff.

But before he entered the committee room, St. Clair acknowledged to newsmen that he was most concerned about presenting the President's version of the events of March 21, 1973. That is the day Nixon has said he learned of the Watergate cover-up and the day White House transcripts show the President discussed Hunt's demands for money.

"That is the area I think is most important," St. Clair said. During this phase of the inquiry St. Clair is limited to presenting facts. He is to present a summary argument later.

St. Clair's strategy also was disclosed in his request to chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., to be allowed to call six witnesses. A copy of the request was obtained by The Associated Press.

At the 50th anniversary celebration of the Statue of Liberty in 1936, President Franklin D. Roosevelt said: "The realization that we are all bound together by hope of a common future rather than by reverence for a common past has helped us to build upon this continent a unity unapproached in any similar area or similar-size population in the whole world," The World Almanac notes.

Art Buchwald

Dine now in Paris, pay later

PARIS — The last time I was in Paris, six years ago, I wrote a column titled "Paris on $500 a Day." The thrust of the piece was that it was still possible to get by in the French capital on $500 if you passed up lunch. My French friends, as well as Americans living in France, thought the article was very funny. But they aren't laughing any more.

Buchwald

When it comes to inflation, the United States is "Mary Poppins" and France is "Deep Throat." But if you don't worry about prices, you can still have a marvelous time in Paris. What you have to do is forget everything and just decide to live for the moment.

I did this the first night I arrived in town. My wife and I went to a small bistro that boasted two stars in the Guide Michelin.

When the waiter gave us the menu, I thought he made a mistake.

"I beg your pardon, monsieur," I said. "But I believe you have made an error. You gave me the Bank of France's financial report for the month of May." "No, monsieur, that is the carte pour dinner."

My wife, who always gets nervous when she sees melon selling for more than $15 a portion, whispered to me, "Let's get out of here."

"Don't be silly. We don't get to Paris very often. Let's enjoy it." I studied the menu carefully. "Now we have our choice. We can have the white asparagus or send Joel to college in the fall."

She said: "You mean to say that white asparagus costs as much as Joel's tuition?"

"Yes," I replied, "but they're the large white ones with Hollandaise sauce. You can only get them in the spring."

"But," my wife, always the practical one, said, "Joel had his heart set on going to college."

"Look, Joel can go to school any time. But how often do we come to France and have a chance to order white asparagus? I know if we explain it to him he'll understand."

There were so many dishes to choose from after the first course that I couldn't make up my mind.

Finally I said to my wife, "Remember that house we were going to buy in Martha's Vineyard?"

"The one overlooking the ocean?"

"That's the one," I said. "Let's have the lobster instead."

"You mean you'd rather have lobster than own a house on Martha's Vineyard?"

"But this lobster is cooked in a special cream sauce of chef. It could be years before we have a lobster like this again. We have to think of our old age."

"I don't know," my wife said. "I had my heart set on that house."

"Well, I have my heart set on lobster and, since they're both the same price, I think our stomachs should come first."

The waiter handed me the wine card. "There's a very nice Pouilly Fuisse," I said.

"Can we afford it?" my wife asked. "We can if we sell the car when we get back home."

"I need a car," she protested.

"All right, I said. "We'll order an inexpensive Sancerre and cancel the orthodontist's work on Connie's teeth."

My wife was becoming agitated. "If it's costing this much for dinner, how are we going to pay our hotel bill?"

"Will you stop worrying? What do you think the World Bank is for?"

A conservative view

Good law in Nixon's argument

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — It is understandable, but it is also regrettable, that so little public attention has been paid to President Nixon's letter of June 10 to Peter Rodino. The letter provides an excellent statement of Nixon's reasons for refusing to surrender further tapes and documents to the House Judiciary Committee.

Kilpatrick

Unfortunately, this long letter was released at a time when editors were struggling with a torrent of news. The President was off to the Midwest. Henry Kissinger was erupting in Salzburg. In Washington, the Judiciary Committee was leaking like a rusty bucket. Few newspapers had space to print the text of Nixon's letter, and few readers would have had time for it anyway. The letter deserved something better.

The situation, in brief, is that the House committee had issued subpoenas demanding that the President surrender certain records. The President refused to honor the subpoenas. His reasons are solidly rooted in the doctrine of separation of powers.

"While many functions of government require the concurrence or interaction of two or more branches," Nixon wrote, "each branch historically has been steadfast in maintaining its own independence by turning back attempts of the others, whenever made, to assert an authority to invade, without consent, the privacy of its own deliberations."

Nixon supplied examples. In 1962, a federal district court issued a subpoena to the Senate, demanding certain evidence for use in the trial of James Hoffa. The Senate, by formal resolution, flatly refused to comply. More recently, in the case of Lt. William Calley, the House Armed Services Committee refused to provide evidence demanded by Calley's attorneys. Chairman Edward Hebert based his refusal on precisely the same grounds invoked by Nixon today.

The judicial branch has taken the same view. In 1953, the House Un-American Activities Committee attempted to subpoena Justice Tom Clark. He refused to obey the subpoena. "The independence of the three branches of our government," said Clark, "is the cardinal principle on which our constitutional system is founded."

In his letter of June 10, Nixon cited a further example. In 1962, a Senate subcommittee demanded certain information from President Kennedy. When he refused to supply it, Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi upheld Kennedy's position: "I know of no case where the Court has ever made the Senate or the House surrender records from its files, or where the Executive has made the Legislative Branch surrender records from its files — and I do not think either of them could. So the rule works three ways. Each is supreme within its field, and each is responsible within its field."

This strikes me as sound doctrine. It is not the power of the law, it is only the power of public opinion that makes presidents obey court orders. As the Supreme Court long ago acknowledged in Mississippi v. Johnson, a Reconstruction case, a federal court is powerless to enforce any order a president chooses to ignore. It is universally assumed that if Rodino's committee were to ask a federal court to approve its subpoenas, and if a court should order Nixon to comply, Nixon would obey. But Rodino's refusal to seek judicial aid is in itself a reflection of the doctrine of separation of powers. A House committee does not want to leave an impression that it is subject to court orders.

Nixon is right in the position he has taken. He is right, that is, as a matter of law. The presidential office simply cannot be made a happy hunting ground for grandstanding federal judges and bloodthirsty congressmen, not even in the name of impeachment. The presidency could not survive as we know it.

But if Nixon's law is fine, his public relations are awful. By refusing voluntarily to give the House committee what it wants, Nixon creates the impression that he has something to hide. The most beautifully reasoned letters ever composed will not dispel that inference now.

Stalin's comeback

At the same time the Soviet Union strives to present a benign face to the world in keeping with the policy of detente, it continues to resurrect the image of its most unbenign leader, Josef Stalin.

Paul Wohl, writing in the Christian Science Monitor, reports that the "Great Stalin" is the focal point of the second part of a popular novel by Ivan Stadnyuk, "War," recently published in Russia.

Stalin's accomplishments as a military leader are praised by the Red Army through its leading marshals. And in the theater and on film the former dictator is presented in a sympathetic light.

All of this is in sharp contrast to the early 60s, when "de-Stalinization" was adopted as the official party line by Premier Nikita Khrushchev. Then, Russians were given at least a glimpse of a Stalin who had made life a living nightmare for millions of his countrymen.

Since then the enormity of the crimes committed by Stalin has emerged more clearly, including the purges, the concentration camps, and the liquidations in the Ukraine where millions of peasants died.

The exiled Russian writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn has eloquently and courageously told the story of the real Stalin and his times. But one can only join him in lamenting the plight of the Russian people at large, who still do not know their own history.

A bookless future?

The handwriting is on the wall for books, says author James A. Michener. The Pulitzer Prize-winner says the reading of books is declining to where it is only practiced today among an ever-shrinking "elite."

Michener said if he were starting out today he would go into television, a medium he predicts will account for 70 per cent of all learning in the future.

Considering the general state of television fare, Michener's vision is profoundly depressing. Shall we eventually see the Nobel Prize for Literature awarded to "As the World Turns"?

It's enough to send you to bed with a good book.

Nixon's Moscow visit worries NATO allies

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — On his way to Moscow, President Nixon stopped off in Brussels to sign a NATO charter and to smile for the cameras. But behind the show of cordiality, our NATO friends are secretly worried that the President will give more than he will gain at the Moscow summit meeting.

This nagging concern appears in confidential draft reports prepared for the North Atlantic Assembly, which gathered in Washington earlier this month.

The reports reveal that some NATO leaders believe the President has already signed away the Western military advantage. The result "could give the Soviet Union tremendous superiority in numbers of warheads and total 'throw-weight,'" warns one report.

NATO leaders are frankly suspicious of detente. "Detente in Soviet eyes," states another report, "is clearly to achieve recognition by the West of the political situation in Eastern Europe and to secure for the East as much economic and technological benefit as can be gained."

Unfortunately, adds the report, the political softening has been accompanied by a military tightening throughout the Soviet bloc. "Hence the price of detente in the political sphere," the report warns, "is increased readiness and vigilance in the military sphere."

A report on "Atlantic Political Problems," takes blunt notice of the "domestic problems" besetting President Nixon. These, according to the report, "threaten to severely handicap his ... authority."

Declares the confidential document: "Most people would now acknowledge that above all, the President needs a major foreign policy initiative to counter the domestic issues that threaten to engulf him."

"This in turn increases the suspicion of his critics that he will seek a major agreement with the Soviet Union that will have more to do with domestic prestige than the longterm foreign policy interests of the country."

In one report, the latest U.S. doctrine that "nuclear attack would be met by whatever scale of launch the circumstances demanded" is described as a "dangerous development."

This permits "a theoretical approach to nuclear weapons which is out of touch with political reality," the document charges. "It implies the possibility of waging limited nuclear war and the expression of such a possibility is a regressive step."

Not only do NATO leaders look with apprehension on the edge which President Nixon has already given the Soviet Union in missile numbers and payload, but the NATO partners are also concerned about the balance of troops and equipment in Europe.

The Soviet satellites, according to one report, could unleash a force of 925,000 men, 15,500 tanks and 2,800 aircraft "with very little warning." As a defense, the NATO nations have only 770,000 men, 6,000 tanks and 2,700 aircraft.

So despite appearances, our European allies aren't united behind the President as he sits down to bargain with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

MISUSED MILLIONS: The major airlines have stuffed $30 million, collected from passengers to combat hijacking, into their corporate coffers.

The rip-off has been known to federal regulators for a year. But only after goading by Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., and a few others has the government stopped the airlines from misusing the antihijacking funds.

The Civil Aeronautics Board, however, has done nothing to recover the $30 million from the airlines. Here's how the air passengers have been taken, with the connivance of the CAB which is supposed to protect them:

At the height of the hijackings in 1972, the government ordered airports and airlines to take special security precautions. The costs were supposed to be met by socking the passengers 59 cents per ticket.

A 1973 audit, however, showed that the average airline spent only 35 cents per ticket on the new security set-up. The remaining 24 cents were merely added to the profits. At nearly a quarter a ticket, the extra revenue quickly mounted up to $30 million.

Brides sound

a sour note

I am writing in regard to your article in Monday's paper entitled, "Weddings: they'll cost only what you let them."

With all due respect to the brides interviewed, I would like to point out that the majority of wedding soloists and organists are professionally trained musicians and should be reimbursed for their services accordingly. After all, if a friend of yours baked your wedding cake, you would pay her, wouldn't you? Or if one of your friends owns the restaurant where you have the reception, you wouldn't think of paying them with a gift.

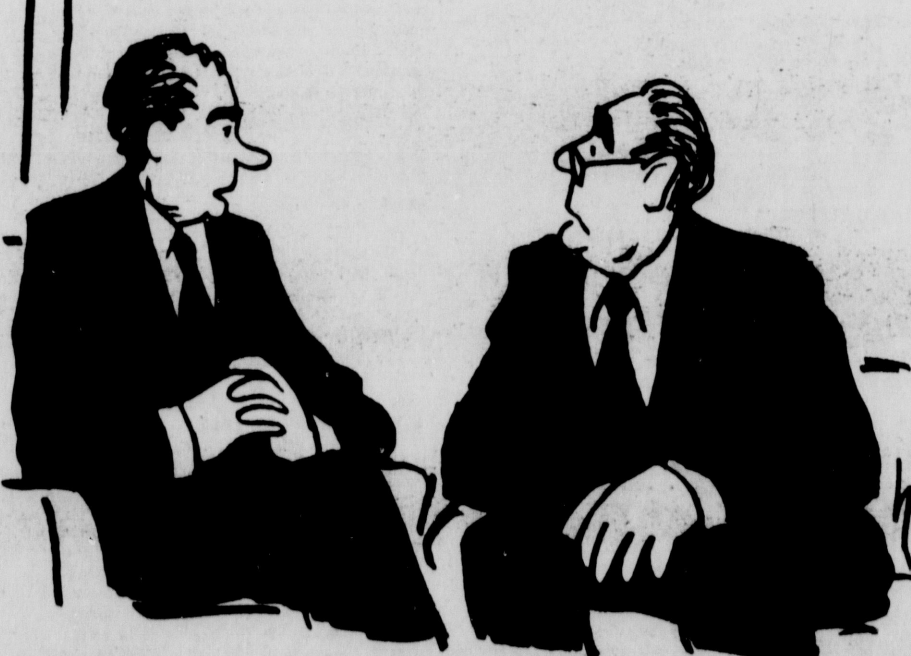

So, future brides, even if you ask your friends to provide your wedding music, please realize that they have other friends who will also ask them to sing or play at THEIR wedding. After all, who needs five pairs of cufflinks every summer?

Thank you for listening to the musician's side of the story.

Plumbers trial jury selected

WASHINGTON (AP) — A jury of six men and six women was chosen Thursday in the trial of former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman and three others charged with plotting the illegal search of a psychiatrist's office.

After two days of questioning the final jury was chosen from a panel of 150.

A lawyer from the Watergate special prosecution force, William H. Merrill, will make the first opening statement Friday.

One of Ehrlichman's lawyers will follow with his opening statement.

That will be followed by the opening presentation of the attorneys for Bernard L. Barker, 57, and Eugenio R. Martinez, 52, and then for G. Gordon Liddy, 43.

All are charged with conspiring to violate the civil rights of Dr. Lewis J. Fielding in 1971 while looking for his files on Pentagon papers figure Daniel Ellsberg.

After the 12 jurors and six alternates were chosen, U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell sent them home to gather their belongings to return later in the evening for a long, sequestered stay. The trial is estimated to last four to five weeks.

There were five black men and four black women on the jury.

The jurors range in age from 26 to 60. The jury includes an economist, an electric company meter reader, a housewife and a man and woman who are both unemployed.

Initially six men were indicted for conspiracy in the Fielding break-in, but one defendant, Felipe De Diego, was dismissed by Gesell and another, Charles W. Colson, pleaded guilty to another charge that resulted in dismissal of the conspiracy case against him.

Ehrlichman was in over-all charge of the White House investigative unit known as the plumbers. The charge is that he authorized Liddy, Barker and Martinez to conduct the break-in which took place on the Sept. 3-4 Labor Day weekend in 1971.

Ehrlichman is charged alone among the four with three counts of lying to a grand jury and one of lying to an FBI agent. The maximum penalty on conviction is 30 years in prison and $50,000 in fines.

The former domestic adviser to President Nixon is also a defendant with H. R. Haldeman, John N. Mitchell and three others in the Watergate cover-up case, scheduled to be tried in September.

Fire departments study is planned

The Pettis County Court Thursday morning commissioned Stanley L. Ponce, area community development specialist for the University of Missouri Extension Service, to conduct a survey of fire departments in Pettis County.

The survey is part of a County Court study into ways to improve fire protection in Pettis County.

Ponce said he will personally visit each fire department in the county to determine such information as the extent of fire protection, the number of active firefighters and the organization of the department.

Ponce said he hopes to report his findings to the County Court on July 15.

Ponce also presented the three judges with informational sheets explaining the organizational differences between a fire protection association and a fire protection district.

Hold preliminary hearing for man

Robert Brauer, 19, Lot 10, Wilson Trailer Court, was bound over for trial to Pettis County Circuit Court after a preliminary hearing Thursday in Magistrate Court.

He is charged with second-degree burglary after he and another youth allegedly attempted to steal frozen food from a locker at the Ku Ku Burger Bar, 1400 South Limit, June 4.

Brauer was apprehended at the restaurant. The other youth was reported to have escaped custody.

Brauer remains in the county jail in lieu of $3,500 bond.

Humphrey had blind trust for financing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate committee staff says Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's 1972 campaign organization used a mysterious blind trust and an apparent money-laundering operation in financing his bid for the presidency.

It also says the Minnesota Democrat concealed from the public that he donated $112,000 of his own assets to the campaign in early 1972, before it became illegal for presidential candidates to contribute more than $50,000 to their own campaigns.

Humphrey's campaign received $89,000 worth of stock and $23,000 in cash from a blind trust managed for him by one of his biggest campaign contributors, Dwayne O. Andreas of Minneapolis. Andreas was quoted as saying he transferred the money and stock to Humphrey's request.

The stock was in the Minneapolis soybean company headed by Andreas himself, Archer-Daniels Midland Co.

The staff report said Humphrey declined requests to submit to an interview, that his campaign manager Jack Chestnut destroyed records of early campaign finances, and that Andreas submitted an affidavit that left several questions unanswered.

It said Andreas didn't state how or when Humphrey's trust got the stock, how or when the trust itself was formed, or what role the Archer-Daniels company played in the transaction.

Humphrey issued a statement late Thursday saying the report was "simply a working draft ... on which changes may yet be made."

He said it "is filled with innuendoes and inaccuracies" and contains "unsubstantiated charges." He said he based this opinion on news reports of the report and that he had not seen the report itself.

He said the blind trust administered by Andreas was set up in 1965 when Humphrey was vice president and pointed out that, according to the terms of the trust, he wasn't told whose stock was in it.

Andreas has been accused in a federal indictment of prompting an illegal donation of to Humphrey's 1968 campaign of $100,000 in corporate money belonging to a subsidiary of the Archer-Daniels company. He has pleaded innocent.

New details of Humphrey's 1972 finances are contained in a report circulated to members of the Watergate committee this week. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

It said that about the same time Andreas transferred Humphrey's Archer-Daniels stock into Humphrey's campaign, Andreas, his daughter and a friend made other large gifts of the company's stock, totaling another $276,000.

Thus, in January and February of 1972 Humphrey's campaign received a total of about $362,000 in Archer-Daniels stock through Andreas and people connected to him the report said.

"Jackson and Company appears to have functioned as a laundering conduit for these contributions," the report said.

The money from the stock sales was transferred into a committee called "Backers of Humphrey," which then transferred about one-third of it into the "Humphrey for President" bank account in Washington, D.C.

"At least to this extend Backers of Humphrey appears to have been serving as a second layer conduit for the Washington, D.C. committee," the report said.
